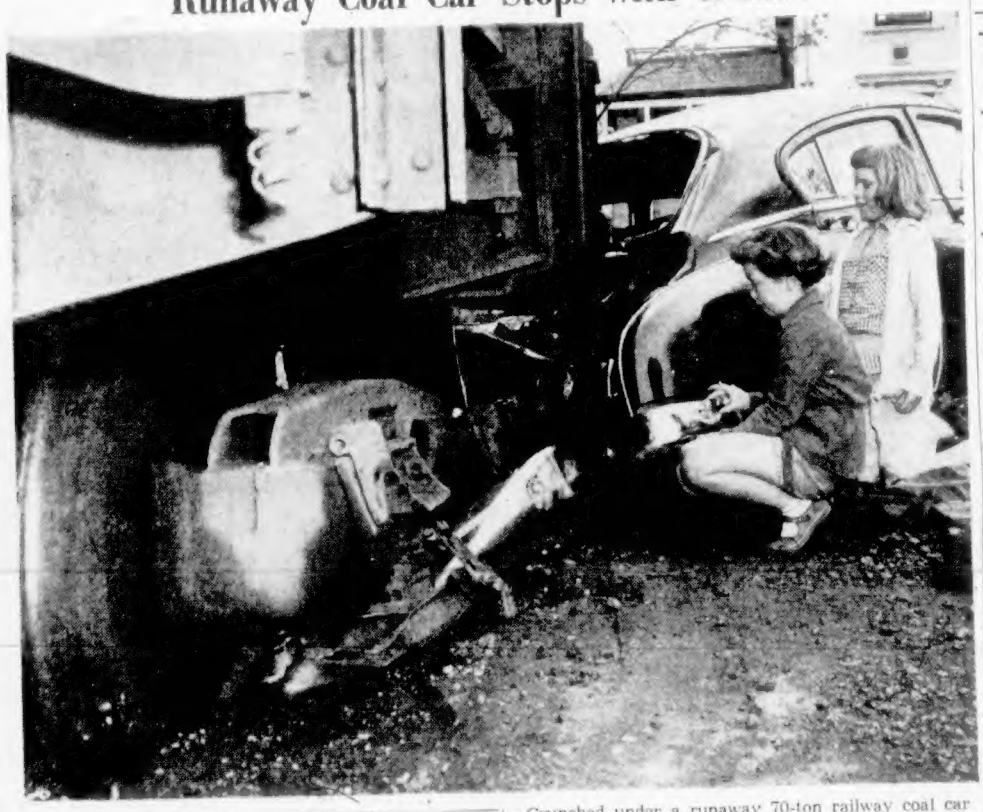
Runaway Coal Car Stops with Crunch



Crunched under a runaway 70-ton railway coal car in a Victoria West coal yard yesterday, this parked car owned by the yard manager, A. A. Moore, 2514 Blackwood, was shoved 40 feet across the property, stopping only when the loaded hopper rolled off the end of the rails and sank into the asphalt pavement. Broken coupling was blamed for setting the car free. Attracted by the crash were Linda Scherk, 9, 701 Connaught, left, and Phyllis Durell, 8, 710 Connaught. —(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

'Not Losing Cold War'

Eisenhower Proposes Anti-Red 'Brain Trust'

Stevenson Raps Policy 'Stumbling'

BY JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower called Saturday night for the creation of a sort of brain trust to advise the government in the global struggle with communism.

At the same time he disputed charges that the United States is losing the cold war.

He recited what he called a string of "cold war victories" although he declared that if the United States does not "keep ahead of the job," then "we are bound to lose."

His remarks, which came in an off-the-cuff addition to a prepared speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, were obviously aimed at such critics as Adlai Stevenson, who only Saturday lambasted the administration foreign policy.

Stevenson, addressing a luncheon meeting of the editors, declared the administration has "drifted and stumbled" in foreign affairs. It has "lost the moral initiative" he said, and is also losing "the military advantage" to the communists. He called, among other things, for a halt on H-bomb tests to demonstrate American leadership in the cause of peace.

Also Saturday, a poll of about 80 editors attending a breakfast session showed them voicing the opinion 2-1 that the United States is losing the cold war. Guests present, who included government officials, shared the same views, though by a lesser margin.

To help keep American foreign policy abreast of changing times, the President suggested a kind of council of wise men—a "rotating advisory board" of private citizens, he called it.

They would be free of the responsibilities of office, he said, and would be able to "devote their brains to the job."

'Expanding Freedom'

He did not go into details, but a high official indicated the President has in mind moving to set up a council of "the best brains available, regardless of party."

"Our nation is called to leadership, . . in the world," the President said, "to keep expanding our areas of freedom and not allow the communist cloud to engulf us little by little."

He said the American people must be given "the naked truth" free of "demagoguery and partisanship."

In his prepared speech, he challenged the present leaders of Russia to prove their peaceful intentions and desire for better relations with the rest of the world by abolishing "the wrongs of Stalin." Among these wrongs he mentioned the continued division of Germany and Korea.

In the course of his impromptu remarks which came after the broadcast of his formal speech, he made an emphatic appeal for an understanding of the needs of Japan for trade.

He said that in greater or less degree the same kind of reasoning applies to other countries. He mentioned Britain, France and Germany.

He appealed for understanding by Americans of countries which engage in trade with communist nations and he said that in working out the whole complex problem of trade and economic relationships "we have a real job."

In exercising the leadership of the United States, he said, it is not enough that the executive and the congress should understand what has to be done and do it—"every citizen has a job he cannot delegate."

Eisenhower began his informal comments by saying that he had heard only Saturday, a poll taken at a breakfast session held in connection with the editors' convention showed editors expressing the opinion, 54-27, that the United States is losing the cold war.

Using Less Force

Every day, Eisenhower said, someone says that "we're losing the cold war" but he has also heard others take exactly the opposite line.

The Soviets, he said, set out to conquer the world using such methods as "lies, deceit and war if necessary." Their aim has not changed, he said, but they are depending less on force.

Eisenhower said the communists did not conquer Korea, they were stopped in northern Vietnam, the Iranian situation has eased, the Egyptian-British argument over Suez has been settled, the Trieste problem has been settled and the "first bridgehead" of communism in the western hemisphere "has been thrown out." This evidently was a reference to Guatemala.

The president said a Soviet government "genuinely devoted" to the legitimate interests of Russia "can have friendly relations with the United States and the free world for the asking."

But the president declared the major international issues of the post-war world are still unsolved despite the switch from Stalinist to a "collective" dictatorship in Russia.

"More basic changes in Soviet policy will have to take place before the free nations can afford to relax their vigilance."

Flood Peril Rising

WINNIPEG (BUP) — A terse new forecast outlining the surprise possibility of a highest-in-history flood crest on the Red river galvanized Greater Winnipeg flood protection committee officials into swift action yesterday.

Committee director Carson Templeton immediately ordered the wraps taken off a carefully-prepared blueprint for protection of the metropolitan area. He put the plan into its first protective motion by assigning dragline crews and contractors to stand by for dike-building Monday if necessary.

The step was taken moments after a special meeting of the Manitoba flood forecasting committee issued a late bulletin reflecting a sudden change for the worse in the flood threat around Winnipeg.

The forecast said the peak crest of the Red now was expected to sweep into this city May 7, and might be at 33 feet, three feet higher than that attained during the disastrous flood of 1950.

The forecast said it appeared more likely, however, that the crest would be somewhere between 27 and 30 feet.

In 1950, the river inundated large sections of Greater Winnipeg and caused millions of dollars in damage.

Carnival Spirit

Poor Old Joe! Chant Greets B&K at Oxford

OXFORD, England (AP)—"Poor Old Joe! Poor Old Joe!" It rang like a gong Saturday in the heads of Premier Bulganin and communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev. Oxford students started this chant shortly after the visiting Red leaders hit town and they boomed it out until they left.

They were on their way to visit Sir Anthony Eden's country house.

Neither Russian speaks English but the students made their point apparent. They were chanting a boisterous liturgy for the downgrading of Stalin by the current Soviet government.

In Moscow there's no telling what would follow such a gag—if anybody was fool enough to try it.

But Bulganin and Khrushchev just grinned and took it like soldiers.

Fortunately for their eardrums the tour of Oxford was as fast as a man running for a bus. They popped in here, there, everywhere and then whirled away. Echoing after them was the rowdy refrain: "Poor . . . old . . . Joe!"

There were 10,000 people on hand when the B and K motorcade pulled into town and a good 4,000 of them were students. They set the tone of greeting: Genial derision, like a crowd cheering the ice sweepers at a hockey match.

It was a carnival day for the students. They booed, cheered, roared their monotonous chant, and one young man unfurled a giant Union Jack and waved it from a pole.

Bulganin and Khrushchev stood on the town hall steps, waving their hats and grinning broadly.

At one place the crowd got impatient. They bellowed "poor old Joe," and interspersed it with "why are we waiting?"

Finally a clear voice demanded in an accent peculiar to Oxford scholars:

"Come on Bulgy—I want my tea!"

ROMAN WELCOME

The Russians tried to rise to the occasion. Once amid the furor Bulganin clasped his hands over his head like a boxer. Khrushchev waved excitedly. To men who speak no English it must have seemed like a Roman welcome.

The Russian visitors were startled to find portraits of discredited Josef Stalin and purged secret police chief Lavrentia Beria facing them as they entered a college hall. Below were two much smaller pictures of Bulganin and Khrushchev with a banner emblazoned "Glory to Stalin." College officials explained it was a student prank.

They managed a peek at one historical bit with Russian background. Oxford officials showed them an engraving depicting a scene July 15, 1814, when the czar of Russia attended a ceremony conferring an honorary degree on the prince regent, later King George IV.

NO CANDLE

It probably didn't hold a candle to the goings on Saturday.

Finally the two Russians climbed into their cars and headed out of town. A mob of students sped them on their way:

"Poor . . . old . . . Joe!"

U.S. Aircraft Forced Down

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A U.S. Air Force plane returned to Tehran from Cairo Saturday with reports of being intercepted by both Israeli and Egyptian military aircraft. The Egyptians forced the plane to land.

The incidents occurred when the plane was on its way from here to Cairo this week with government men stationed here and their families.

Maj.-Gen. Robert MacClure, chief of the U.S. military advisory group in Tehran, said he has not yet received official written reports on the incidents.

He said, however, the pilot and co-pilot of the plane reported that Israeli Mystere jets intercepted the U.S. plane over the Mediterranean but that it flew on. As it approached the Egyptian coast, he said, MIG15s ordered it to land. It did so on the military field of Almaza.

In Washington, both the State Department and the Air Force confirmed that the Egyptians had intercepted the plane and signalled it to land.

"The Egyptians apparently thought the plane was off course," a State Department spokesman said. He added that after an explanation of the plane's trip, it was allowed to proceed. He said the plane was detained about 45 minutes.

Dozens Of Boats Missing

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Darkness Saturday night hampered a gigantic search for 29 outboard motorboats missing during a race to Catalina Island 21 miles away.

Coast Guard officials said there may be as many as 70 persons on the tiny craft.

The air and sea search began about dusk when the boats failed to show up at the village of Avalon, the finishing point. More than 200 boats were entered in the race, the Outboard Motorboat Association reported.

The Coast Guard said 18 vessels, including the 225-foot cutter Ponchartrain, were called out in the search. The aerial search was called off because of darkness.

Car Crashes Into Cemetery

One youth was hurt and another boy and a girl dazed when the car in which they were travelling just after midnight crashed into Ross Bay cemetery after hitting a tree.

Garry Dahlgren, 17, 818 Douglas, was taken to hospital suffering from cuts and bruises. The other two were unidentified.

The car, which was badly damaged, went out of control while being driven east on Fairfield. It struck a tree, ripped up 30 feet of cemetery hedge and halted near a headstone.

Soldiers Hurt in Car-Scooter Smash

Two Work Point soldiers were injured last night when they were thrown from this motor scooter in a collision with a car at Douglas and Speed. Leo V. Frank and Jim Reed, both 25, were treated for possible leg fractures, cuts and bruises. Police said the crash occurred when Robert B. Littlefair, 607 Speed, was turning left onto Speed while the motor scooter was heading into town on Douglas.—(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

Critically Hurt

Fiery Snag Pins Woman to Ground

A burning 30-foot snag caused critical head injuries to Mrs. H. G. Taylor, Pat Bay highway, last night, when it crashed to the ground pinning her underneath.

The accident occurred while she and her son were inspecting a rubbish fire on their property.

Central Saanich police said her son, with assistance from friends, pulled her free.

She was then rushed to Royal Jubilee Hospital, where she was in critical condition at midnight.

Penicillin Labelled 'Missile of Death'

COCHRANE, Ont. (CP)—Coroner James D. McClinton said here Saturday that penicillin is a "possible missile of death" and that 600 persons on this continent have probably died as a result of indiscriminate injections of the drug.

Dr. McClinton, coroner for the district of Cochrane, made the statements in a speech prepared for delivery to the Ontario Medical Association.

The wholesale injection of penicillin is often useless and five to 10 per cent of patients given penicillin become sensitive to it, he said.

In Toronto, a leading medical authority, commenting on the statement, said the figure of 600 people who have died in the last 18 months is only a small portion of the very great number of people treated with the drug.

The authority estimated that 58,000,000 persons — about one-third the population of the North American continent—have been treated with penicillin.

'Channel Chuckles' Join Comic Pages

Something brand new in comic pages appears for the first time today in The Daily Colonist's 16-page comic supplement.

It is "Channel Chuckles," a humorous look at television by Bil Keane, the pioneer in this field.

Mr. Keane's daily comic panel has appeared with Roy Parrett's regular "TV Talk" column for months. The new comic page has been started because of the daily panel's popularity.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

A MAN at work can sometimes persuade himself by auto-hypnosis that his children do not exist.

The illusion is quickly shattered when his wife brings the small creatures to town and invades the place where the breadwinner is employed.

* * *

One moment he is merrily at work, imagining himself a free citizen. Then he hears a footstep that doesn't belong in the place, and he looks up from his task into three pairs of eyes.

The smallest pair is regarding him solemnly from an elevation of six feet, because the child is being held on its mother's shoulder.

Two more pairs of eyes, belonging to the mother and the walking child, are focused upon the man from the five-foot-six level and the three-foot level respectively.

* * *

"I want some juice and a chocolate bar," says the walking child.

"The grocery money, please," says the child's mother. The visit usually occurs on payday.

The smallest child says nothing, but continues its solemn gaze; then breaks into a foolish grin, stretches out both arms and says "Da-da."

* * *

Such a sudden appearance of his human burdens at a time when he believed himself secure in the workaday world may prove too much for a sensitive man.

In extreme cases, he may run for the exit, board a bus and never return.

Usually, however, he stays and faces facts. But he ages visibly. The young, vigorous man who came bouncing in to work that morning now goes out for a coffee break as a grey-faced, middle-aged father.

No, he tells the boys' mother, the cheque hasn't come through yet for the grocery money, but it should be available very soon.

No, he says to the walking child, he can't come home and play on the lawn, because he has to work now and make some money, so that little boys can have something to eat.

"I'm not hungry," says the little boy. "I don't want anything to eat now," he insists, having finished a chocolate bar and a glass of fruit juice.

"Come home and play, Daddy," he urges. But his bent, glum old father trudges back to work.

Grubstake Becomes Million

A $20,000 gamble by 26 employees of Lundberg Explorations Ltd. of Toronto became a million-dollar payoff when the mining claims in which they invested were bought by Steel Company of Canada. Claims were staked by secretaries, accountants and geologists of the company and they financed exploration and drilling. Walter Hobbs and Ray Hope, left, two of the investors, are examining the motor generator and electro-magnetic equipment used to discover and prove existence of iron ore body near Kapuskasing, Ont.—(CPC)

A PADRE IN PRINT

By REV. WILLIAM HILLS

Tomorrow is St. George's Day, and for all the notice the average citizen will take of this occasion he might as well have been the patron saint of Timbuktu instead of England.

It has always been a puzzle to me why April 23 has taken more than second place to March 17 or February 25, especially in a country which owes its parliamentary practices and its democratic processes to the nation whose patron he is.

Just the other day, I was chatting with the venerable archdeacon of Victoria. He is a genial Irishman and he was gently ribbing me about St. George.

"St. Patrick" he declared, "was a real historic figure but George was only a legend."

Well, I'm not so rash as to dispute with an archdeacon—especially when we were both cosily packed into the back seat of a car—and especially when he has history on his side.

But was his point well-taken?

The legend of St. George is real enough even if its subject isn't, but like Santa Claus even a legend can have a practical impact upon the thought and character of the people who believe in it.

St. George did not become the patron saint of England until the reign of Edward III in the 14th century.

His Deeds Forgotten

As a matter of fact even as early as the fifth century, poor old George suffered from an abysmal lack of public relations. His deeds whatever they were had been quite forgotten.

In 494, Pope Gelasius mentioned him in a list of those "whose names are justly reverenced among men, but whose acts are known only to God."

So it would appear that this George, who suffered martyrdom at Lydda in Palestine, was in actual fact an unknown soldier of the Cross.

It seems to me that he could be called "the unknown warrior" who laid down his life for Christ. He is quite appropriately the patron saint of a nation which has honored "the unknown soldier" in the Abbey which is the central shrine of the nation.

Gilbert Chesterton once penned these lines:

"St. George he was for England
And before he killed the dragon,
He drank a pint of English ale
Out of an English flagon."

That, of course, is sheer poetic whimsey but these are days when more of us ought to be for England. Many folk seem disposed to pronounce a funeral oration over the glory of the Mother of Parliaments these days. But, take care, twisting the lion's tail—like Russian roulette—is an exciting but hazardous and finite enterprise!

Famed Playwright Dies at Age 60

NEW YORK (AP) — Charles MacArthur, 60, playwright, movie writer and husband of actress Helen Hayes, died Saturday in hospital. He had been suffering from a kidney ailment and severe anemia.

He was best known for his play "The Front Page," a drama of the newspaper business which he wrote in collaboration with Ben Hecht.

Automotive Trade Fixes Standards for Workers

By BILL MAVOR

The automotive trade is now "designated" for the issuance of certificates of proficiency.

Labor Minister Lyle Wicks has announced that the trade is now under provisions of the Apprenticeship and Tradesmen's Qualification Act.

Certificates, obtained by tradesmen upon voluntary application for examination, will be issued for mechanics, body finishing and refinishing, automobile trimming, upholstery and general interior finishing, and for radiator work.

All these were components of the trade for apprenticeship purposes and now also have been placed under the provisions of qualifications outlined in the act.

To obtain a certificate, any person will have to submit proof of completion of a period of practical training in the trade before an examination is allowed.

Appointment of examiners was not announced. It is learned, however, that the next step will be discussions between labor, management and government, including the education department, to prescribe examinations.

In error was a report in this column some weeks ago that an examining board had been set for the trade.

Automotive Retailers' Association of 1,200 garage and service station operators throughout B.C., including 160 member firms in Greater Victoria, took exception to reports that operators here and in Vancouver were in disagreement about examinations.

The association states there is no difference of opinion. "The association is unanimously of the opinion that the legislation will do much to raise the level of efficiency in the industry, guaranteeing to the motoring public fully qualified and efficient workmanship and service."

The Victoria and Vancouver trade unions involved cannot agree upon the legislation. The union here favors certification on the voluntary basis whether or not by a government board.

Vancouver workers favor examining workers, but strictly by a union board.

A four-hour extension of the 44-hour work week in the logging industry began Thursday, effective until Nov. 30, 1956.

The Board of Industrial Relations granted the extension, sought by companies and opposed by the CCL federation and woodworkers' union, but ruled that work shall not exceed eight hours daily as under the Hours of Work Act.

Chris Pritchard, of the Workmen's Compensation Board, will address a meeting in May of the Victoria District Trades and Labor Council (TLC). A definite date is not known.

The Board of Industrial Relations is investigating union complaints that a sub-contractor has violated the $1-an-hour minimum wage order for pipeline construction work near Fort St. John. The contract involves clearing right-of-way.

A unionist who was an executive or committee member in his union for 20 years has retired from the Victoria Typographical Union (AFL-TLC).

Vince J. Baines was a past president of the local and of the B.C. Typographical Conference, and was a TLC labor council vice-president for many years.

In Victoria since 1912, he served overseas in the First World War, being injured, and took up his trade with the Victoria Times on his return in 1923.

Assigned to only one convention during his years, he travelled to Vancouver.

Moving up the union ladder is Norman Gillan, recording secretary of the Victoria Milk Drivers' and Dairy Employees' Union (TLC). He becomes business agent of the Vancouver Laundry Workers local 292, on May 2.

His appointment was announced by the teamsters' union of which both locals are affiliates.

A Palm Dairies driver, he has been a union delegate to Victoria District Trades and Labor Council and the Senior Citizens Campaign Council, and has taken a personal interest in James Bay PTA.

Ring Culture Gets Results

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Ring Culture of Tomatoes — (G. E. G., Victoria). The ring culture you mention is a new method of growing greenhouse tomatoes.

The rings—lengths of drain pipe or pots with an enlarged hole in the bottom—are set on beds of cinders and filled with a normal soil mixture. The tomato plants, growing in these rings, make two sets of roots. The upper set, growing in the soil of the rings, is fed with chemical fertilizers, while the lower set forages for the moisture reserves in the bed of damp cinders below.

Some phenominal crops have been reported from greenhouses using this method, but its chief advantage is in its economy. The cinder beds may be used year after year without replacement or sterilizing.

Polyanthus Primrose—(W. L. L., Duncan). Polyanthus are unlikely to come true from seed, especially when, as in your case, they are growing in beds of mixed colors. Dividing the plants is the only way of perpetuating the especially desirable colors. Providing that good cultivation is maintained, the size of the blooms should not deteriorate.

Lift your selected plants immediately after flowering, divide them, and replant six inches apart each way in a shady bed enriched with leaf mould. Lift again in October and plant back into their sunny flowering position. It is a good idea to mulch the surface of the sunny winter bed with thoroughly decayed manure in February.

Choice of Greenhouse—(T. J. A., Saanich). Whether you select a greenhouse with glass right down to ground level, or one with a wood, brick or concrete base, will depend on what you want to use it for.

If you plan on growing crops such as tomatoes and chrysanthemums planted directly in soil beds, the all-glass type is to be preferred. If you want the house mainly for subjects growing in pots or boxes, you would be better off with a solid base and suitable staging.

Vines for Shade—(C. D., Victoria). A very suitable vine for a high, north-facing wall would be the self-climbing Virginia creeper (Ampelopsis veitchii) which gives an attractive cover of greenery in summer, turning to vivid scarlet in autumn.

There are gold and silver variegated ivies available, too, and these also would cling to your wall without any need of wires or other supports.

Red Hot Pokers—(L. P. R., Wellington). The best time of year to lift and divide your Red Hot Pokers is early April, but it is not too late now. These plants demand a soil which is well drained, where no water stands in winter, and generous manuring. A top dressing of peat or compost after replanting would be appreciated.

Peruvian Lily — (L. F., Oak Bay). You'll never grow good Alstroemerias as long as you keep moving them around, for these Peruvian lilies are extremely resentful of root disturbance. They are best planted while quite young — April is the best month — and left strictly alone thereafter. They like a warm, sunny position in well drained soil with a bit of grit in it.

Incidentally, these plants are not lilies, nor do they come from Peru. They are members of the Amaryllis family and are natives of Chile.

Interest Creates Life Zest

VANCOUVER (CP)—More interesting jobs for all instead of shorter hours is the formula British author J. B. Priestley offered for a happy life here Friday.

Mr. Priestley told an audience at the University of British Columbia "we must find that work increases, rather than diminishes, man's self-respect."

Jack Brown, director of industrial relations for the B.C. Electric Co., opposed Mr. Priestley in the panel discussion by saying:

"Big business with its mass distribution methods made possible the high standard of living enjoyed in North America."

Mr. Priestley replied that a "gadget standard of values" prevails on this continent and that the smallest child in the world is more important than the greatest corporation.

Roaming Gypsies Sick of Freedom

They're Willing To Settle For Jobs, Homes, Education

By WILLIAM MARSHALL
Colonist Correspondent

VANCOUVER—The age of romance got a final knock on the head in Vancouver this weekend with a piece of news that would make a violin cry. The gypsy is tired of roaming—sick and tired of it.

Right now instead of traipsing around the country enjoying the gay free life—and maybe getting tossed out of the city in which he was born—the gypsy wants a job like everybody else and an established home and maybe TV.

The long winding caravan trail across the years and the miles has finally unwound, but good.

That's the straight from the horse trader's mouth report of a gypsy man recently arrived in Vancouver who foretold his peoples' future—and never mind crossing his palm.

"The gypsy has quit travelling," he said. "The old people used to roam, but the younger generation wants a home in one place and an education for its children.

"We want to go to work," he said. "We still have the old copper and tinsmithing skills handed down from generation to generation. But the time has come to apply them in a shop or plant."

Time Running Out

It might soon be too late for Canada's gypsies to find the peace and employment they seek in the land of their birth, he added.

"There are only a few families here now—perhaps a hundred people," he said. "And they're scattered from Quebec City to Vancouver. Some in Hamilton, some in Winnipeg, a few in Edmonton. Toronto, which is home to many of us is a closed door."

"Most of the families have four or five children," he pointed out. "They don't want to go forever wandering around homeless. They want a chance to settle down and make a living."

Many Canadian gypsies have left this country for overseas and the land of their forebears, he said, and many have gone to the United States.

"But we don't want to leave," he said. "This is our birthplace the same as yours. All we want is a chance to live in it at one address."

There's a bit of an epilogue if the Twentieth Century song of the gypsy is haunting you with a feeling the romance has gone out of life:

That was the song of a gypsy male. At the last moment a gypsy woman said softly, "let the men get jobs. And let the women make a dollar telling fortunes."

Malnutrition Charge Denied

Distraught parents of a two-month girl, who died in the arms of her mother, have bitterly denied reports that the infant suffered malnutrition. "It's a rotten, untrue thing for anyone to say," said Frank Kitchener, at right, a resident of North Bay, Ont., and 25-year-old father of little Christine, who is survived by sisters Marilyn, at left, and Peggy, seen above with their mother. Ivan Thurlowe, deputy police chief, is reported as saying, "There is no doubt Christine died of malnutrition. Whether this was caused by lack of food, improper diet or faulty digestion I can't say." An autopsy will be held to determine cause of death. —(CPC.)

Physicist Upholds Radar's Accuracy

A physicist, called as a prosecution witness in Sidney police court yesterday, testified that radar used to clock Patricia Bay highway motorists was accurate within two miles an hour.

As a result, Justice of the Peace D. G. Ashby said evidence was sufficiently accurate to warrant conviction of Leslie V. Dawkins, 1544 Richmond, who had pleaded not guilty to a charge of exceeding the 50-mile speed limit.

He was fined $10 and $10 costs.

Police testified that radar clocked Dawkins' car at 60. The accused argued the possibility of error.

Prosecution called a physicist, Andrew Hill, who said he had examined the radar equipment and said in his opinion two miles an hour was sufficient allowance for error. Two constables who operate the radar screen said the set is checked each time before it is used.

Dinner guest Henry Koller wore his welcome thin even before the meal was served.

City police court yesterday was told that the Victoria man came to dinner in an argumentative mood, picked a fight with a girl present and wound up pushing and striking his hostess.

He pleaded guilty to charges of assault and being intoxicated in a public place, and was remanded to Monday for sentence.

A fine of $40 was imposed by Magistrate Henry Hall on Henri E. Jeanpierre, 1074 Willow, who pleaded guilty to indecent exposure.

'Bernice' Lays 282 Eggs

TYLER, Tex. (AP)—There's a little old momma quail that's got this whole town talking.

Bernice, as she's called, started laying eggs about 10 months ago and forgot to stop, according to George C. Stodghill, state quail hatchery superintendent here.

The 282 eggs Bernice has produced in the last 10 months is an unofficial United States record, Stodghill says.

"She's still layin' them and there's 29 more days to the laying season," he says. Ninety per cent have hatched.

Stodghill says Oklahoma previously claimed the champion hen with 100 eggs during a leaying season.

COMOX (CP)—Three RCAF Lancaster aircraft from 407 Maritime Reconnaissance Squadron based here took off yesterday for Londonderry, Ireland, where they will take part in maritime warfare tactics training for six weeks with the Royal Navy.

Organ Recital For Charity Attracts 500

Some 500 persons attended a recital by United States organist Claire Coci in Metropolitan United church last night.

The concert was sponsored by the Victoria branch of the Canadian College of Organists on behalf of the Gorge road nursing home.

Miss Coci played the opening "Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor," by Bach, Mozart's "Fantasie and Fugue in F Minor," as well as more modern selections by Marcel Dupre and August Mackelberghe.

Exotic Dogs on Parade

"Gorgeous George," and three French butterflies were among the exotic entries in a record-breaking double-bill bulldog show in Vancouver this weekend.

The two-in-one shows on Friday and Saturday in the Seaforth Armoury attracted the biggest turnout of entries in at least 20 years, spokesmen for the Kerrisdale Kiwanis Club, reported.

More than 280 dogs of 55 breeds were judged during the two-day program which also featured obedience trials.

Gorgeous George among the list of entries turned out to be a happy-go-lucky pug who took enough ribbons to earn a Canadian champion rating in the ring, which is more than his namesake could do.

The butterflies — maybe that's a little literal — were two Papillons, a French originated lap dog that got its name from the shape of the ears.

Judged best dog in show at Friday's judging was a Pekingese, Chia Lee's Chang Loi of Wi-Mor, owned by Mrs. Eugene Hanlen of Woodinville, Wash.

* * *

The sightseer type of visitor was getting a kick out of such entries as a toy Maltese which her owner said was used to wash dishes with, a 170-pound St. Bernard named "Toddy," posed traditionally with a two-pound Chihuahua.

And the explanation of an owner: His German "Weinsaner," so-called wonder dog, "couldn't even answer the phone."

Bumper Tourist Year

Vancouver and B.C. booster Harry Duker, a former president of the B.C. Automobile Club, is forecasting a bumper tourist year for the city and the province.

He said this weekend inquiries received at the automobile club office from prospective visitors were running at least 50 per cent higher than at this time last year.

Most of the inquiries were from eastern states, he said.

However, he was worried about the traffic hazards visitors would have to run in the Vancouver area, he stated. He said a report that Attorney-General Robert Bonner was considering sterner treatment for impaired and drunken drivers needed further toughening.

What we need, he contends, is an increase in both the maximum and minimum penalties for "impaired, careless and dangerous driving."

He said drunken drivers should suffer "impoundment of their cars as well as licence suspension."

"They can try driving without a license," he said, "but they can't drive without a car."

Militia Camps Readied

Preparations are in hand for summer camps for militia soldiers, and the Canadian Women's Army Cadets, it was announced in Ottawa yesterday.

B.C. militia camps will be at Esquimalt, June 13 to 21, and Vernon, Aug. 11 to Sept. 1. The army cadet camp will also be held at Vernon, from July 7 to Aug. 25.

More than 20,000 soldiers, CWAC members and nursing sisters of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps attended last year's camps. About 5,000 cadets also spent time in camp.

Single militia men who go to summer camp get a $25 bonus, and wives of married men receive an extra $40.

Services Mark Queen's Birthday

A 21-gun salute boomed out from Work Point barracks at noon yesterday to honor the 30th birthday of Queen Elizabeth. It was fired by the 4th Light Anti-Aircraft Battery.

RCN ships in port were decked out in colors for the occasion.

Millions From Sky Predicted

PENTICTON, B.C. (CP)—Rain making operations in Washington, Oregon and California could be worth $20,000,000 to $50,000,000 in economic benefits, a researcher said here Saturday.

J. S. Barrows of Missoula, Mont., made the statement to the annual meeting of the western snow conference in this interior British Columbia city. Mr. Barrows is chief of the fire research division in Montana.

He said the economic benefits from cloud seeding would come through an increase in rainfall, a reduction in hail storms and a reduction in forest fires caused by lightning.

He said that in December, 1955, results of seeding 5,000 storms with silver iodide showed increases of 9 to 17 per cent in precipitation in the three Pacific coast states.

The committee conducting the experiments also found evidence that the frequency of potential lightning producing storms may be reduced by cloud seeding.

"By the same analogy," he said, "and for the same technical reasons, if the frequency of lightning can be reduced, cloud seeding at the proper time should also be able to reduce the frequency of hail."

There was nothing in Christ Jesus' entire ministry which said that his healing method was for then but not for now.

Christian Science has come as the promised Comforter to restore the lost element of healing to modern religion. It shows the sick, as well as others in need of help, how to claim and have their God-given freedom from fear, sickness, and want.

Meighen, Massey Named To Receive Canada Medal

By TOM GREEN

OTTAWA — A proposal that the first two awards of the Canada Medal should be made to Governor-General Vincent Massey and to Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Toronto, is now before the federal government, it was learned last night.

The award to Mr. Massey, it is felt, would constitute fitting recognition of the success he has achieved as the first Canadian to have served as the personal representative of the sovereign here since confederation.

The award to Mr. Meighen would recognize his distinguished services to the nation as Canada's only living ex-prime minister.

The Canadian government decided several years ago, to [illegible] distinctively Canadian award for outstanding service to the state. No award of the medal has been made.

It has been suggested that when the Canada (Arts) Council is established that body might be given the task of recommending Canada Medal awards to the government. However, pending the establishment of that body the government could decide on its own to make a few awards of the Canada Medal.

Starving on $1,000,000 a Day

ASIDE from its actuarial instability, the worst feature of the Dominion government's "universal" pension is that it has failed completely to improve the circumstances of those who need the pension, while giving extra money to tens of thousands who don't. Elderly people with no means of caring for themselves are not one penny better off than they were before the means test was abolished. They were already getting $40 a month if they needed it. They are still getting only $40 from the Dominion, and must submit to another means test to qualify for a provincial bonus.

So who does benefit under the automatic pension system? Nobody but the people who, by the federal government's unrealistic measurement of need, do not require it at all—people whose independent income ranges from what is adequate for comfort in retirement to what amounts to great wealth. Many even are drawing the pension while continuing to retain high-salaried positions. To heighten the absurdity of this, part of the pension has to be paid back to the government in income tax by those whose total income exceeds the statutory exemptions.

Pensions to all at age 70 are costing the taxpayers approximately $1,000,000 a day. The government is very proud of its pension plan and maintains that this is money well spent. It might be if it assured a satisfactory standard of living to those who are dependent on it; but the fact is that without the bounty of the Provinces—who are under no obligation to supplement the base pension — they would be reduced to starvation level. Without adding to the burden on the taxpayers the federal pension could probably be made adequate if it were restricted to those in want.

Thus the sole improvement brought about by the universal system was the elimination of the means test, which inflicted great indignity on applicants. But as we have pointed out earlier, the same purpose could be accomplished by accepting as proof of eligibility the signed declaration contained in the annual income tax return. What could be simpler; and what could do more to relieve human distress that has become acute enough to arouse anxiety throughout all segments of the community?

An Asset Worth Keeping

WHEN Victoria business and working projects are canvassed the emphasis is generally thrown on the promotion of tourism and the need to attract secondary industries to this area. Together with provincial and federal government establishments here, they form the firm core that buttresses the economic well-being of the Greater Victoria district. On their expansion and growth depend the opportunities for generations growing up and for the continued sustenance of the community at large. There is another large asset, however, in the form of the fighting forces.

The navy has been at Esquimalt so long it is taken for granted, although by virtue of its manpower and extensive base operations it contributes immensely to the financial fabric of the city and its environs. Were the navy to be withdrawn its loss would be little short of calamitous. Another happy source of income to the area has come about since the Queen's Own Rifles encamped at Gordon Head less than a year ago. Some figures cited by the regiment's commanding officer last week bear noting.

The payroll alone of the regiment since coming here has been about $1,750,000, a very large part of which would be spent in and around Victoria. Add to this the very considerable expenditures entailed in maintaining a military camp—food, supplies and equipment of various kind, most of it purchased here—and it will readily be recognized that local business has a customer in the Queen's Own without which it would be much the loser.

The navy is not likely to leave the station where the White Ensign has flown for nigh on a century, but the stay of the Queen's Own at Gordon Head is indeterminate. There was no promise the regiment would be kept here more than a year or two. Apart altogether from the human side, and the men of the Queen's Own are every bit as welcome themselves as their money, any steps that can be taken to ensure that this becomes a permanent army camp should not be lost sight of when economic projects are being considered.

By the Golden Gate

FIFTY years ago, on April 18, 1906, the earth made an adjustment of its crust in a fault region of the Pacific littoral, and San Francisco was confronted with a holocaust. From dawn when heavy shocks drove citizens into the fields, until dusk on the first day when fire had taken grim possession of the city San Franciscans rallied with a courage that impressed the world. Some 72 hours after the disaster and while the embers still smouldered they began to rebuild the city that was their love and pride. Stately and tall it stands by the Golden Gate today, with its myriad homes around a blue Pacific lagoon; as well known to many Victorians as their own city of flowers and gardens.

Tempered by that experience, San Franciscans have gone on to many a triumph since in the scintillating port which became a meeting place on the highways and seaways of the world. Linked with Victoria from this city's birth, San Francisco is firmly woven into the affections of this community for abundant and well-remembered cause. And from this city, also astride a fault zone, will go many a wish at this time for the continued success of the brave and resourceful community which built its homes from the ashes and built well.

Courtship of Despair

By SETH HALTON

SURELY the sorriest spectacle in the recent political history of this province was the convention in Vancouver two weeks ago of the British Columbia Liberal party.

Arthur Laing keynoted it. On the eve of the convention the leader of the once great party issued what the Canadian Press called a "carefully worded statement" in which he pleaded, in effect, that the Liberals needed the help of the CCF to survive.

He didn't use quite those words. What he said was that the ranks of Liberalism can be enriched by a great section of . . . Canadians who have been supporting the CCF party.

"Within the broad scope of the Liberal party," he said, "there is a place for the cautious and the radical alike."

Then, with sycophancy born of sheer desperation, he added: "The highly intelligent leaders of the CCF must know that if they turn their back on state socialism they are removing the only identification tag that removes them from the Liberal party. . . . We are probably becoming witnesses to a major political shift, not only in this province but in this nation as a whole . . ."

Well, it's been apparent for a long time that the Liberals have been great admirers of the CCF. For 20 years or more, in fact, both federally and provincially, the Liberals have blatantly stolen the CCF thunder. Indeed, the thinking of the two groups has been so akin federally that as early as the years of the Second World War a marriage of convenience was talked of.

Its advocates, few as they were, thought that the moderate members of the CCF were truly Liberals at heart and should enter the fold. The radicals could be left as an effective rearguard fighting a sacrificial battle for socialism.

It didn't happen, of course. The federal Liberals were much too strong and much too proud even to acknowledge the existence of the thought. And more power to them.

Not so in British Columbia. Out-manoeuvred, out-governed, repeatedly out-voted by the Social Credit, the Liberals, like the Conservatives before them, have seen the indelible writing on the wall. Why else would the historic proponents of free enterprise attempt a dalliance with a party which still can't shake the Regina Manifesto?

As undistinguished as Mr. Laing's cry for help is the newly-drafted platform with which the Liberals naively say they are going to win the next provincial election. It shows some brilliantly original thinking.

A fine example is the expressed belief that the federal government should set up an independent regulatory body to govern both the CBC and private radio and television. Many of us have been saying this for years.

Another is that the federal government, as well as the provincial, should pay full taxes on property they own in municipalities. (They'd better be careful. If Mr. Bennett doesn't get them Mr. St. Laurent will for heresies like this!)

And they go on. They'd like to abolish the amusement tax at amateur sports events, though few amateur sports dare charge enough at the gate to make the amusement tax apply. They would like to reduce car licences to a flat $10, though why they never did it in their years in power is a mystery.

And, with particular profundity, they say they will bring about "orderly development" of the Columbia river power potential and adopt a forest management policy based on the forthcoming report of Chief Justice Sloan even though they have no idea what the report might contain!

"Liberals can take great heart from this convention," Mr. Laing was quoted as saying.

So can their political opponents.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax — of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

I WENT the other day to hear General Simonds speak to the Canadian Club. He spoke well, without a note, and with a clarity to match the reputation he made as a field commander in the last war. Some of this, obviously, was because he knew his subject from A to Z.

Now most military men, you might think, talking about their own profession or along an allied line, would be equally fluent of speech. Not that a professional soldier—or sailor or airman for that matter—should rival a professional politician whose stock in trade is words; but a commander trained to analyze a situation and make swift decisions could be expected at least to express himself with some aptness.

Nowadays it seems they do, but it was not always so.

It was said of a famous general in the first war—there was none better known but he shall be nameless lest this prejudice your opinion of him—that when he opened his mouth his brain automatically shut off.

This I'm sure was an exaggeration but apparently he was a poor hand at giving voice to his thoughts.

* * *

I remember listening to another field marshal, Allenby this time, in a prairie theatre during the twenties. Allenby was as masterful a character in the field as Montgomery yet his account of his Palestinian campaign was feebly dull.

As an orator he would have made an undistinguished lance-corporal.

Sir Roger Keyes spoke in Victoria during the last war, before an audience agog with expectation. Here too disappointment reigned. If not exactly tongue-tied this great admiral, as Nelsonian a figure as the first war produced, had small felicity of public speech.

The modern crop of commanders is of a different oratorical breed. We live in an age of public relations, of course, and fighting men are no longer silent, praise be.

At any rate you can't think of Montgomery, for one, as being at a loss for words anywhere at any time. When he paid a swift visit here shortly after the war he spoke only a few words from the Parliament Buildings steps, but they came out crisply without a pause.

He could fill the Arena were he billed to speak there when he comes to Victoria in June, and doubtless live up to expectations.

* * *

Some of you would hear Lord Alexander when he addressed a luncheon gathering here while the incumbent of Rideau Hall. He too was one to whom speech came easily enough. If he said nothing remarkably new he was at home on his feet.

His brain certainly didn't shut off when he opened his mouth.

General Crerar was another who in his postwar visit to these parts was equally neat of expression; not a master of rhetoric perhaps but well able to talk explicitly and without hesitation.

General Simonds, then, belongs to the new tradition of service commanders.

That in itself made his address the other day, and it was a full hour long, of sustained interest. He is fired with a mission, of course—the need for greater defence preparedness—and fervor induces a fine flow of words.

These came so smoothly, however, as to add greatly to the listening.

It is rather irrational and not really fair to expect that military men should be fascinating public speakers; they are primarily men of action, not of words. Yet somehow some of the gilt comes off their gingerbread if they are lame or halting of speech.

When they are not it adds immensely to the pleasure of hearing them and their stock goes up accordingly. That was decidedly the case with the former army chief of staff, General Simmonds.

Letter from London

Worm in the English Oak

By RICHARD L. THOMAS, Daily Colonist Correspondent

THERE seems to be quite a lot of worm in the English oak just now. At the moment there is quite a pretty controversy going on about the Queen's Flight—the air transport of the Royal family, operated by the Royal Air Force. It has been suggested that it is about time the Queen bought some new airplanes, but some fairly influential publicists think it is a shocking idea. Is there not a credit squeeze on? Should not the Royal family set an example to the nation?

It all boils down to the inferiority complex which seems to be developing in Britain. It comes not only from credit squeezes but from other currency controls which make it practically impossible for a Briton to move abroad except in the guise of a poor relation. Because of dollar controls we cannot go to Canada, or the United States except as the guest of a good Samaritan and we seem to be reaching the point where some quite influential Britons think that this sort of thing is right and proper.

Take the case of the Queen's Flight. The Vikings which are being flown were a postwar stop-gap. They were made from bomber spare parts hastily adapted to civil needs. The Viking became the British equivalent to the DC3 as the workhorse of our domestic airlines. They served a useful purpose, but British European Airways scrapped them three years ago as obsolete and too expensive in maintenance. Many of their routes have been taken over by Viscounts providing greater comfort and faster travel.

* * *

Now the Queen also uses lush maroon Daimler cars for surface travel. She employs court dressmakers and is quite fussy about her appearance. So far no one has suggested that she should be content with a 1938 Morris to ride around in or buy her clothes off the peg at a West End store, but the idea that her obsolete aircraft should be replaced has met with a howl of protest—by the kind of gentleman who would insist on booking a Viscount himself.

The Queen's Flight should be a showpiece for British aviation. It should have the best and latest aircraft. At the moment there should obviously be Viscounts for short hauls and Britannias for long distances. There is a question of prestige involved far more important than the Queen's personal comfort. It was commented, for example, that in Nigeria the Royal progress by air was not unlike the Queen arriving for an official visit in a vintage pre-war car and the officials and newspaper correspondents preceding her in a 1956 Jaguar. She flew to Nigeria in one of the oldest British airliners still in service—the Argonaut.

It does not do Britain or British aviation any good to have the Queen fly around in tatty old airplanes which commercial operators have declared obsolete years ago. No one decries the old Viking. It did a good job, but commercially it is not regarded as sufficiently attractive for the tourist trade—but the argument is that it is good enough for the Queen.

* * *

The result, of course, is that it perpetuates the picture of the impoverished Briton. We cannot even afford a decent airplane for our Queen; something quite in keeping with the British tourist arguing about the price of a cup of coffee in a Swiss restaurant under the pretext that he has to ration his francs because of currency restrictions. Sometimes it may be true but more often than not he hasn't got the money anyway.

Britons already have the reputation of being the poor relations of Europe; and Canada and America see only one kind of Briton—the business tycoon who gets dollars on his selling record. Canadians and Americans get the idea that the visiting Briton is after something. The idea that the Briton is genuinely interested and wants to find out something is a vanishing conception. He is a gentleman in reduced circumstances with a rather poor, almost counterfeit, currency.

The argument over the obsolete Queen's Flight reflects the kind of mental inertia which is like worm in the oak. We need to recapture a bit of faith in ourselves. We need a bit of a national courage—too many people abroad think we used it all up between 1939 and 1945. Actually there is plenty here but it is being constrained by miles of red tape. Even a businessman finds that it is a major job to get dollars for a visit across the Atlantic. Many give up resenting the prying and interference. The government instead of making things easier think that they will persuade him by making it difficult to sell at home. If he does manage to get through the red tape and acquire some dollars, he is still in the position of having to calculate whether he can afford to take a potential client out to dinner—and if he does he may find the income tax people querying the bill. Was it really necessary to have soup and fish?

Some people refer to it by the astringent term "the bloody-mindedness of officialdom." There is too much of it. If Britain cannot afford a decent airplane for the Queen the sooner it files its national petition in bankruptcy the better. In fact it is nonsense just as it is nonsense that we are doomed if the state took its clammy hands off currency control. Control is losing far more dollars than freedom and enterprise would bring in. We need a private exterminator to root out the worm and he could start with the major infestation in the British Treasury.

A City in Flames

KING Prajadhipok of Siam, Queen Rambi Barni and an entourage of 50 touched Victoria when the liner Empress of Japan docked from the Orient, 25 years ago last week.

The king, who numbered among his titles "Supreme Arbiter of the Ebb and Flow of the Tide, Brother of the Moon, Half-Brother of the Sun and Possessor of the Four-and-Twenty Golden Umbrellas," was confined to his cabin with malaria. He went on to Vancouver and points east.

Sir Arthur Currie, commander of the Canadian Corps in the 1914-18 war, planted a tree in the mayor's grove at Beacon Hill Park on a visit to Victoria.

Revolutions were under way in Madeira (against the Portuguese government) and in Honduras.

Alfonso XIII, who had just abdicated the throne of Spain in a bloodless revolution, was cheered by thousands as he arrived at Victoria station in London.

SAN FRANCISCO was shattered by an earthquake and fire 50 years ago last week.

The earthquake hit at 5.12 a.m., April 18, 1906. Minutes later the city was aflame. Hundreds were dead; hundreds of thousands homeless. The quake itself left much of the town intact, but fire was rapidly swallowing the areas that remained.

Water mains were smashed. Firemen dynamited buildings in a desperate attempt to halt the flames. Survivors wandered through the smoke, flames and rubble. Soldiers confiscated vehicles and the contents of grocery stores; shot looters without ceremony.

Mayor Schmitz and police chief Dinan directed safety and rescue operations from headquarters in the palatial Fairmont Hotel on Nob Hill. The hotel caught fire, and they retreated to another headquarters.

From the north end police station on Sacramento Street, the mayor and the committee of safety decided to blow up 16 blocks of the city along Van Ness Avenue, a district containing many millionaires' homes and apartment houses.

Fourteen men were killed in an attempt to rob the United States mint, which had been saved from the flames with its millions in coin and gold bullion.

Gradually the flames were halted; the 300,000 refugees camped outdoors were fed and supplied with water. The broken city began to rebuild. But thousands of people who had lost wives, children, fathers, mothers and brothers would long remember that black Wednesday in 1906.

THE boiler of the steamer Fort Yale blew up as the vessel was moving up the Fraser River, 85 years ago last week. Three men were killed and a number injured. Captain Smith B. Jamieson, master of the ship, was missing.

Someone saw Capt. Jamieson go up in the air with the fragments of his ship, but no one had seen him since. The explosion happened at Union Bar, between Hope and Yale.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

WHEN you take a motor trip and stay at motels along the way, it pays to get started early in the morning to get the mileage behind you and leave you free to start watching for a good motel around 4 p.m.

Besides an attractive and fresh-looking motel, you should also get one not too far away from some centre of population where you can get a good supper and a good breakfast next morning. With these two facts in mind, you ought to be in your motel well before 5 p.m. Because shortly after that hour the tourists start to pour in like starlings coming home to roost. A motel with not a car in front of it at 2.30 p.m. will be packed solid before 6.

Now and again, you run into a motel that has a wayside restaurant just across the highway, or even next door. This is the ideal situation.

But not all these handy eating places are good. Many of them subsist on the proximity of motels rather than on the quality of their food and cooking. Touring, however, gives you no redress. There is nothing you can do about a bad restaurant you will never see again.

One thing my wife discovered on a recent lengthy trip. And that is, if there are cheerful sounds coming from the kitchen, you are going to get good food. "Beware," she says, "of eating places where silence reigns behind the kitchen partition. If you can hear chatter and laughter, especially of the women, coming from the kitchen, the food will be good."

And on our whole journey of some three to four thousand miles, the rule held good. If nothing is audible but the sounds of pots and pans, look out. Back there, some gloomy man is going through the motions of cooking. It's just a job to him. When the swing door from such a kitchen opens, the girl who comes forth bearing your singe-edged eggs and dried bacon will have a frozen face. The toast will be damp. The tomato juice luke warm. When she fills your water glass, it will slop over. A fly will come and visit you within a minute.

But let there be laughter and loud chatter from behind that door, and the girl who comes smiling out, at some joke just heard, will be bearing a tray of heartily prepared food, whether it be 7 a.m. or 7 p.m. or at stuffy, hot, high noon, which must surely be the meanest time of day to stand over a stove.

Local TV Reception

I wish to express my sincere appreciation of the good work now being done by your TV columnist.

We viewers must support his lone fight to inject a little sense into this absurd question of the new local TV station on channel 6.

Experts tell us that there is great danger that channel 5 and possibly channel 4 will be ruined by interference from this local station. The choice of channel 6 and the selection of the transmitter site apparently could not be more disastrous.

Obviously there are many other sites available and apparently other channels as, for instance, channel 8. There are too, no doubt, other cities who would welcome and support a good local service.

If channels 4 and 5 should be ruined for us the new station would have to face enormous public resentment which, in view of the surviving competition, might well prove fatal.

Victoria advertisers are not numerous, nor excessively wealthy and have conspicuously refrained from supporting the channels already abundantly available for TV advertising. It seems to laymen like myself that the new station will find it prohibitively difficult to earn an income adequate to present programs good enough to replace those lost to us on channels 4 and 5.

We viewers must demand assurance that no interference will be propagated. Collectively, we have an enormous investment in TV sets and we must insist that our returns from this investment are not allowed to depreciate through public apathy.

Put to the Bottom

Almost 50 years ago the Aged Ladies' Home was built to house 98 persons and staff of 15. If the people who were sincerely interested in the welfare of older citizens enough to look to future needs, isn't it good reason to read with grave concern, with 2,000 senior citizens in the city, now there is being considered building another project miles from the city for only a small handful? What, could and would, happen to all the rest of the worthy applicants?

Adequate provision is being made in all the new buildings in Victoria for future needs, but the cards seem to have been shuffled and put the desperate needs of the pensioners on the bottom. To say large units are not advisable is not the answer. There, too, the larger the units would be, the cheaper to build and maintain. Properly supervised, a purely government project, with a large auditorium, also a "non-profit" grocery store for tenants only, a resident nurse, and near enough for tenants to walk to town, would be the one and only right solution.

Many people do not seem to realize how many of these senior citizens have come from the best families of the city, province and Dominion, and are certainly entitled to respect and consideration. Many citizens who have read the "Chris Foster Letters" have since brought many bits of sunshine into the lives of these good pensioners, and I am sure they are thankful and appreciate the kindnesses shown them.

A Veteran's Last Days

We hear so much of royal commissions for police probes, logging, etc., I think it is time we had one for the care of the sick.

In our part of the world we are all rather puzzled. Our friend, a veteran with a war-wound pension, was told a while ago he had six months to live and sent home from the Veterans' hospital. His wife cared for him as long as she could; but when he required care she could not give he was taken to local hospital. In 10 days his wife was told he was a chronic case and could not stay there, though he had only two or three weeks to live.

One nursing home refused him, as he was completely helpless and the other did not have on night duty a nurse who could give hypos and he needed four each night to keep pain down and so the only place for him was back at the Veterans' hospital by ambulance.

As he is not dying of his war trouble, his wife has to pay for all his room, board, doctors, laundry and barber, etc. Why, why why? He is a veteran of the First World War, and all veterans should receive their care, whatever the cause.

Does the public know of this condition? Does the Legion know of this condition? And are they willing for our veterans to be treated this way? If so, why?

I certainly hope someone makes a start to inquire into cases like this and get a change made. He has suffered bodily for 40 years. Why should he have to go so far from home for the last few precious weeks?

Lady Minto Hospital

A short time ago Dr. Larry Giovando, MLA, was blowing gaskets and fuses all over the place because of the wildly irresponsible statements of Mrs. Lydia Arsens, MLA, on the subject of cancer.

Dr. Giovando is guilty of the same wild irresponsibility when, as he has done on at least two occasions recently, he refers to the Lady Minto hospital at Ganges as a "fire trap." His statements, reported in the press, cannot but have an adverse effect on patients in that institution.

In repeating this canard he is, in effect, accusing the fire marshal's department of dereliction of duty.

During the campaign for a new Gulf Islands hospital this same canard was given much publicity, some proponents going so far as to state that the hospital had been condemned.

As a taxpaying landowner who signed the petition in favor of a new hospital, I can state that one of the main factors in the defeat of the scheme was the mis-statements indulged in by certain Salt Spring doctors, which created strong resentment in many quarters. If a new campaign is to be initiated, for heaven's sake let's have it run on a "clean" slate.

Dr. Giovando, who probably has not even seen the inside of the Lady Minto hospital, should keep his nose out of a matter which concerns only the district's taxpayers, and is therefore none of his business.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Weeks of undercover investigation paid off Friday night when RCMP recovered $22,400 believed to be part of $44,000 stolen from a Canadian National Railway express van in Edmonton on April 9.

The money was found in possession of a man arrested in Cloverdale by Vancouver RCMP officers.

The money, mostly in $5 bills, was stolen while being transferred from one Edmonton bank to another.

Friendly Public Nurse Health Service 'Front'

This is another article in a series specially written for The Daily Colonist by the Victoria-Esquimalt Board of Health, appearing each Sunday, intended to give readers helpful advice on health and welfare problems.

Representative of the health department best known to everyone is the friendly public health nurse. She is the member of the health workers' group who visits schools, counsels mothers at well baby clinics, offers suggestions in the home, plus a hundred other duties all geared to foster prevention of disease.

You might first meet a public health nurse in one of many baby clinics each month. Here mothers bring their small babies for immunization, assistance with diets prescribed by their doctors, or any one of the many other problems of a young mother with a new baby.

Better still if a mother and her husband attended parent-craft education classes she might meet nurse leading discussion or teaching relaxation exercises which pave the way for easier delivery. Each year more than 1,500 babies visit with the nurse in one of the five clinics in the city.

Another place you might see this worker is when your Johnny is starting school. His first school health examination by the doctor would be arranged and set up by the nurse.

Regular Supervision

When Johnny goes to school he gets regular supervision by the nurse. Communicable diseases, vision testing, hearing tests, or the guidance to the correction of defects are all areas which the nurse might be in contact with your school child. Of course, do not forget the PTA meeting where the school nurse leads the educational discussions on "Better School Lunches" or some similar topic.

Schools and babies may take the most time but many other activities can be seen in a nurse's work day. Mrs. Jones has a preschool child with a skin rash. The young Smith girl requires an operation for a cleft palate at the Health Centre for Children in [illegible] financial help might be obtained from some of the many organizations with which the nurse has contact.

The social worker of the Family and Children's Service wants consultation and suggestions for dealing with a health problem of one of her clients. The local venereal disease clinic wants persons in contact with an infectious case located. Because of the variety of her duties, you are likely to see your district nurse almost anywhere performing a variety of specialized jobs.

The fine progress made in controlling tuberculosis is in no small way due to the visiting nurse. From the day a case of TB is found to the time of actual cure, a nurse is always handy arranging visits for chest x-rays, giving counsel in the home, advising the chest clinic on home problems, and a variety of other duties all geared to getting the patient well.

In addition, treatment with modern antibiotics and drugs are given by the nurse at the Health and Welfare Centre or in the home on the order of the chest clinic. Home visits by the nurse help the TB patient, considerably shortening the time of recovery.

You may never have seen this "lady with the lamp." On the other hand, you might never know as she wears no uniform and goes quietly and efficiently into many homes and situations. These women are especially trained for this type of work and in most cases have taken university training in public health following periods of work in hospitals as registered nurses.

The range of work, oftentimes difficult health situations confronted, and the great responsibility carried willingly, all add up to the prestige enjoyed by this devoted health worker. Learn to know your district public health nurse as she can be of help and guidance to you in almost any health situation you care to think of.

Teachers To Seek Whacking Increase

TIMMINS, Ont. (BUP) — Some 70 teachers in this area are expected to launch a campaign to allow strapping in the classrooms despite opposition from their school boards, principals and inspectors.

The teachers said they were opposed to the order which restricts punishment with the strap to principals. They said the strap was the teacher's only means of discipline.

They added the inspectors are "frightened of the department of education, the principals are frightened of the inspectors and the teachers are frightened of the principals—but the pupils are not frightened of anybody."

Third Contest

Parents' Report Asked On Yard Playgrounds

Parents of Greater Victoria school children were urged yesterday to make a full report on backyard playgrounds in the third annual playlot contest sponsored by Victoria and District Parent Teacher Council.

Some 8,000 pamphlets outlining rules for the contest will be given to the children next week. Parents are requested to return entry forms to the schools before May 31.

"It's really a report on all playground facilities at the children's homes," said John Halstead, contest chairman. "Don't fail to send something in."

Entries must include one or more pieces of permanent playlot equipment, such as a swing, see-saw, sandbox or playhouse.

Judges, who will be selected later, will view as many playgrounds as possible,—and will award the Police Benevolent Association for best playlot, B.C. Electric shield for most practical playground and McLennan, McFeely and Prior cup for most artistic arrangement.

Framed certificates will be presented to classes from kindergarten to grade four with the highest number of entries proportionate to enrollment, and to schools with greatest total of entries on the same basis.

Judging will take place and awards will be presented before schools close June 28.

Full-Scale Rehearsal Of Scoutorama Today

BY ROBERT E. MILKS
Executive Commissioner, Victoria District

The main talk among the packs and troops this week has been about the Scoutorama and the rehearsal at the Arena at 1.30 p.m. today.

Almost 2,000 Cubs and Scouts will turn out to stage the first joint rehearsal of the pageant which will be held at the Memorial Arena on May 18 and 19.

Most packs and troops have been visited by the director of the pageant, Bert Williams, and some outstanding scenes have been prepared.

Esquimalt group went to the archives and has duplicated costumes worn by Governor Sir James Douglas and his party.

The whole group, including mothers and fathers has been working on this scene. Fairfield group was taught by David Martin and Tony Hunt how to do Indian dances native to this region.

Scouts and Cubs are learning the history of Victoria as they prepare to put this history over to the public. Properties have been supplied by various firms to lend authenticity to the show.

David Watkins and Norman Given of Emmanuel Baptist Troop and Lyle Kerr and Lloyd Powell of the Colwood Pack have received their one-year service stars. Robert Striha of Colwood and Tony Hopkins, Wayne Smith and Kenny Jones of Emmanuel Baptist were awarded their two-year service stars.

When Sir James Douglas stepped onto Vancouver Island he wore the crimson overcoat and beaver cap of the Hudson's Bay Company. Provincial archives supplied an original from which Mrs. C. Marryat and Mrs. H. Lloyd made replicas of cap and coat, to be worn by Jerry Cuthbert of First Esquimalt Troop in the Scoutorama in Memorial arena May 18 and 19. Close to 2,000 local Scouts will participate. Smoothing the gold epaulets is Scoutmaster Walter Putt.—(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

Camping Across B.C.

Deep Cove Scouts are eagerly awaiting the arrival of their camp this year. They are going to travel across B.C. to the Calgary Stampede and back, camping on the way. Scoutmaster J. Redwood said the boys have earned much of the money for the trip by cutting cedar fence posts for local people.

Visits were made to Mount Tolmie, Oaklands and Deep Cove groups by members of the group contact committee and the training team this week.

Dunsmuir Troop under Scoutmaster H. Harrison has flown down to Seattle to visit a troop there. The boys worked on bottle drives and other projects to earn their trip.

U.S. Judge Kiwanis Speaker

Canadian-born Matthew W. Hill, now an eminent U.S. jurist, will speak at a noon Kiwanis Club luncheon Tuesday at the Empress hotel, featuring Canada-U.S. Good Will Week.

Topic of the judge of the Washington State Supreme Curt, born at Bowsman, Man., in 1894, will be "Two Nations, Great and Free."

Good Will Week will be celebrated Monday through Saturday in most of the 4,200 communities of the U.S. and Canada in which Kiwanis clubs are located.

It was established 35 years ago as a project of Kiwanis International to commemorate the signing of the Rush-Bagot agreement 138 years ago, demilitarizing the boundary between the U.S. and Canada.

Kiwanis clubs of the two countries have placed 25 "peace markers" along the 3,000-mile unfortified border between the two nations to dramatize their good neighborliness.

Canada's Investment Abroad Is Mostly in Foreign Loans

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's long-term foreign investments have increased almost five times in the last quarter-century, but a big portion of those investments represents government loans.

That perhaps is one of the great differences between Canadian investment abroad and foreign investment in Canada. All the capital [illegible] Canada from the United States, for example, is from private inestors.

MOSTLY LOANS

Over the decades, Canada's investments abroad increased to $4,275,000,000 in 1954 from $926,000,000 in 1926. But the portion representing government loans—to help Britain and others in need of funds—rose to $1,705,000,000 from $56,000,000.

The peak of these federal credits was in 1949 when they reached $2,000,000,000. Since then, they have declined with some of the loans being repaid. But the proportion is still large.

FOUR TIMES GREATER

Nevertheless, private Canadian investors appear to be finding increasing scope for their investments abroad. Total direct investment in branches, subsidiaries and other operations of Canadian-controlled companies rose to $1,644,000,000 in 1954.

And investment in foreign stocks and bonds have just about doubled to $926,000,000 from $493,000,000.

So that, all told, private long-term investment abroad has risen to $2,570,000,000 from $890,000,000.

But this is relatively small compared to the total $12,469,000,000 in long-term foreign capital invested in Canada by 1954—double the $6,000,000,000 of 1926.

The portion coming from the United States rose to three-quarters of the total in 1954 from one-half in 1926—rising to $9,622,000,000 from $3,196,000,000.

New Budget Controversial

Many Britons Cool to 'Lottery'

By HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

One rather suspects that the United Kingdom Information Office in Ottawa is not overly proud of Chancellor of the Exchequer Harold MacMillan's entry into the state lottery business.

The U.K. office in its release on British press comment upon the 1955 budget omits comments upon the lottery bonds that so far as the outside world is concerned are undoubtedly the controversial piece of the budget.

To the more die-hard Britons, a state lottery is associated with the volatile currencies of the smaller Latin or Gallic European states, and is probably a symbol of decadence, or at least currency devaluation.

The daring of Mr. MacMillan in introducing such a scheme in Britain is likely to cause as much alarm in his own party as in the left wing of the opposition.

However, as the U.K. Information Office quotes confirm, the Chancellor has ben given some credit for his attempts to encourage savings.

In this respect the Times of London praises the higher rate of interest being given on new savings certificates, the new issue of defence bonds and income tax concessions on savings bank interest.

The Financial Time of London says the new budget will attempt to right the inflationary damage done by the 1955 budget. It praises the policy which aims at high savings, disinflation and lower government expenditure.

The Daily Telegraph regrets that nothing has been done to help the middle classes.

ENTHUSIASM NEEDED

Belief that Victoria is not taking anything like enough interest in industry was expressed by R. V. Robinson, manager of the Vancouver Division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association during a visit to Victoria the other day.

Mr. Robinson pointed out it would be a bad thing if Victoria failed to hold its place as the second largest economic sphere of influence in the province.

"We in CMA certainly don't want to see Victoria losing out in importance," he said.

"The trouble is that industry today has to be enticed," he added. "Vancouver through its board of trade and other organizations is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars fighting for new industries. Industries don't fall into your lap like ripe plums. You have to fight for them."

He pointed out that Victoria had a reputation to live down. "There's a feeling that you don't want industry, and certainly you don't give prospective customers much encouragement," He said.

Referring to the loss of the Sidney Roofing plant, Mr. Robinson said this was a severe blow to the city, and he suggested that Victoria should be prepared to spend money, not only to attract new industry, but to hold what it already has.

No Serious Hurdles

Victoria University Idea Welcomed by Educators

By HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

Victoria educationalists do not think there is any serious hurdle to the establishment of a full university course in Victoria.

Intrigued by the suggestion that Victoria should press like the other Canadian provincial capitals, for a university of its own, professors and others believe it can be done within the next few years.

At present the Victoria College, now amalgamated with the Normal School provides a four year arts course that requires only one additional year at UBC to qualify for a master's degree.

"It would take very little extra effort to fit that fifth year ino a local syllabus," said one local professor.

His opinion was that main objection would come from UBC itself as being jealous of its monopoly in the awarding of degrees in the province.

The local provincial library he said would be a distinct asset to students reading history, while Victoria had access to various aspects of legal jurisprudence which was lacking in Vancouver. The pending construction of the Dominion forest biological research station in Saanich would be important as an adjunct to setting up of a forestry faculty.

MAIN CRITICISM

Main criticism of the formation of an independent Victoria university might come from big business which is inclined to regard any form of decentralization as wasteful.

One such Victoria industrialist felt that it would create overlapping and waste of talent.

He did not agree with the thought that while business can apparently do extremely well under mass production, education could be better treated on a more individualist note.

Large universities are not among those which hold the highest educational rating, the top placing usually going to smaller universities which specialise.

The prophecy that there will be 33,000 university students in B.C. in 25 years time, made by Education Minister Williston recently has got people in Victoria thinking that a second university will have to be formed sooner or later if UBC is not to become a huge soulless seminary to be likened to a famous production line at Detroit.

While Victorians are slow to take action because they feel the time may not be ripe, the danger is that delay might create new and unexpected difficulties.

Not the least of these is the availability of space.

COMPLETELY SUBDIVIDED

Real estate men say it will not be long before the whole of the Mount Tolmie area is completely subdivided for residential building and that the chance of getting the university into a compact campus could easily be lost within the next year or two.

If Victoria does not act, it seems possible that claims will be made for a second university in the interior of the province.

THE VOICE OF ONE

By REV. DR. FRANK S. MORLEY

Modesty and girls' clothes again grab the headlines. Some people contend that the human body is beautiful and savages wear no clothes. True, but immodesty and sexual provocation certainly create vulgarity and crime. The most immodest clothing I know is men's bathing suits. They are disgusting.

We need healthier attitudes to the matter of sex. Is there no happy medium between pathological silence and abnormal emphasis? Sex is either a beautiful and constructive element of life or it is ugly and destructive.

Youth should know the facts at the proper age. Girls have suffered 'horrible embarassment and fear because mothers failed to describe the development to maturity. Boys also suffer unnecessary shock and shame when they do not understand normal experiences of their growth. Boys should understand the growth of girls.

Teen-agers exhibit many symptoms of their normal sexual tension and struggle of which exhibitionism may be one. They get crushes on older people. Some never grow up, but keep an excessive attachment to a friend after marriage. An abnormal possessiveness also may continue between a parent and child. One girl sent for her mother on her honeymoon!

Teen-Age Love Suspect

Teen-age love affairs are properly suspect. Infatuations are normal, but the person we love at fourteen we usually do not love at twenty. "Going steady" is a freakish phenomenon with minor merits, but it creates stupid attachments.

A boy and girl went together from the age of twelve. He went away to university. Finally when she was twenty-eight he told her it was all off. Many unhappy marriages occur because young people lack courage to break off their relationship.

Some girls suffer agonies because boys do not date them. They may allow tragic liberties to keep a boy friend. The picture "Marty" is a lot of nonsense. Every boy and girl is datable if they use their brains. Some of the most beautiful and popular girls I knew in school have made shambles of their lives.

If a girl holds herself cheaply, men hold her cheaply. And remember—boys like to boast. You don't have to pet to be popular. To the contrary boys become afraid to go out with you.

On the problem of kissing — there's an enormous difference in kisses! Girls should learn ways of saying "stop" without being unkind. Don't refuse in such a way that the boy feels he is repulsive to you, but don't let him do something to make him repulsive to himself.

Nor do boys like possessive girls or girls who phone them. But neither do they like girls who are too independent. Everyone has to feel needed and appreciated. Teen-agers who do not develop many interests but become pre-occupied with sex grow up into bored and boring adults.

Teen-Age Tensions

Parents and schools should recognize teen-age tension. While they should not be too intrusive like the mother of one poor girl who always sat belligerently in a room while her daughter entertained, neither should they allow unchaperoned parties.

Nor should they unnaturally urge a social maturity which robs children of their childhood as the present unbalanced emphasis on dancing does in our schools. Drinking is sure trouble. Some young people will not attend high school parties because of the drinking.

Promiscuous people are to be pitied. They have a personality weakness. Many women feel cheated in marriage because their husbands regard sex as merely satisfaction of physical hunger. Sexual love means as much as two people bring to it. There's a vast difference between a stud farm and a home.

True love involves physical hunger but it also involves a shared desire for truth and beauty. It is just about impossible for two people to create a happy marriage unless they have similar social and economic backgrounds, similar religious convictions, and common enthusiasms in esthetic and social values.

Sex is an entrustment, given by your Creator. Use it badly and it destroys you. Use it reverently and it makes life inexpressibly dear.

Four Island Copper Mills Predicted in Five Years

Vancouver Island is in for a copper boom, says veteran Victoria prospector George Winkler, who began prospecting at Jordan River in 1909.

Mr. Winkler told a Natural History Society meeting at the Provincial Museum this week that he believed four large copper mills would be operating on the Island within four or five years.

He estimated that they would treat 2,000 tons of copper ore a day.

"This means a total output of about 100,000 pounds of copper a day," he told the Colonist yesterday.

"With copper at present prices, this would be a big uplift for the Island's economy."

Mr. Winkler, who is younger than his years, said with a burst of enthusiasm: "At last there is a new interest in the mineral wealth of this island."

QUATSINO AREA

Mr. Winkler said two of the new 500-ton copper mills would be in the Quatsino sound area. A third would be at Cowichan Lake and the fourth at Jordan River.

"One of the Quatsino mills will be operated by the Noranda Exploration Co., which has proved 350,000 tons of copper at Yreca," he said.

"The other will be about 10 miles away at the Coast Copper mine, owned by con-[illegible] Co., with 750,000 tons of ore developed.

"Cowichan Copper figures on a 500-ton mill, and the same goes for the Sunloch mine at Jordan river, which now has 1,000,000 tons of copper ore proved."

The Sunloch mine was discovered by Mr. Winkler in 1915, and it was later taken over by a syndicate and is now owned chiefly by Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co.

LAST DIRECTOR

Mr. Winkler, president of the Gabbro Copper Mines, is the only one of the original directors left since the [illegible] birth in 1920.

Noranda Exploration Co. is now diamond drilling on Gabbro property adjoining the Sunloch mines.

Mr. Winkler came to B.C. in 1897 and has been prospecting in the Jordan River area off and on for 40 years.

City Auditorium Needed

Room Space, Open Hand Convention-Luring Items

Erection of an all-purpose auditorium in Victoria will only be one of many important steps needed to boost the city into the ranks of big league convention centres.

To begin with, this isolated island must be made more accessible to the mainland; quality and quantity of hotel accommodation must be increased; and finally, the city itself must show appreciation for convention spending by instilling warmth in the welcome.

These points were brought out in a report prepared for the Chamber of Commerce auditorium committee by committee member Roderick Clack after a study of features that attracted the name-pin and sample-case boys to other North American cities.

"Victoria has its natural attractions as a holiday city," Mr. Clack said. "Apparently it has also an advantage in its situation on the northwest corner of the Pacific coast."

GREATER PERCENTAGE

He said studies disclosed that Vancouver has a greater percentage of visiting conventions than either Montreal or Toronto. Seattle and Portland easily hold their own with Miami and Atlantic City.

Big drawback for Victoria is its inaccessibility, the report said. "Delegates must have rapid access to a convention city because the average duration of a convention is only four days.

"This disadvantage is aggravated by the infrequency of air service from Seattle," he said. "However, many delegates will feel that the pleasure derived from a boat trip more than justifies the extra time spent in travel.'

Convention months do not clash with peak tourist months, the report showed. As a result hotels would enjoy increased business throughout the year.

"Probably the most popular convention months are April, May and October," said the report. "These months coincide with attractive seasons in this city."

"It is likely that more hotel rooms than at present will be necessary if full advantage is to be taken of an auditorium as a convention attraction," Mr. Clack said.

Atlantic City, a relatively small city, has by far the greatest delegate attendance in the country. "Contributory reason for this is the amount of hotel accommodation provided."

Mr. Clack warned that an auditorium alone will never make a city sufficiently attractive to conventions. "Victoria scores on some important factors but falls down on others.

"However, no city can take full advantage of the possibilities which convention business offers without the facilities provided by an auditorium," he said.

"There are buildings available which could provide accommodation for a larger number," he said, "but they are not suitable. This is a serious limitation of facilities which Victoria should be able to offer."

PORTLAND, SEATTLE

Seattle and Portland, he said, have auditoriums constructed just after the First World War, and are deficient in many respects.

"Even so, they managed to attract visiting conventions of 8,000 and 6,500 respectively, and have a fairly high average attendance," he said.

If Victoria is to exploit the convention potential, it will need a convention bureau, the report said. Its duties would be to advertise the city's facilities, assist and smooth out meeting preparations and make the delegates feel the city appreciates their presence.

Ponderous Beast Has Teacup Touch

LINZ, Austria (NANA)—The proverbial "bull in a china shop" can take etiquette lessons from a circus elephant who broke loose in the streets here.

The pachyderm got away from his keeper, entered a china shop and looked things over before delicately picking up a glass flower vase in his trunk and lumbering out.

Nothing was broken.

Motorboat Collides With Truck, House

BALDWINSVILLE, N.Y. (AP)—A truck and a motorboat collided Saturday and a house lost its porch.

The mixed-up mishap occurred on a flooded private road, the Onondaga county sheriff's office reported.

William E. Walker, 54, was driving along the road when his truck hit the motorboat. The boat careened into a nearby house and ripped off the porch.

Investigators said the boat had broken from its mooring and floated down the road, which was covered by about a foot of water.

Marathon Recording Stint

Sinatra's in the Big Money Now

By SHEILA GRAHAM

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—Frank Sinatra not only gets $125,000 plus 25 per cent of the profits from Columbia's "Pal Joey," but he also gets top Billing. Only three years ago, his salary at the same studio for "From Here to Eternity" was $8,000.

Frank was on a nonstop marathon at Capitol to make enough records to take care of him in this country for the six months he will be in Europe.

A British review of "Safari" describes Janet Leigh as the "don't come into my tent before I've taken off a little more" school of acting. And, after jeering at Victor Mature for taking on the Mau Mau singlehanded, the writer expresses wonderment that the British allowed Vic to leave Kenya — "Perhaps they are keeping him in reserve for Cyprus." It's fashionable over there to make fun of American actors. Why, I don't know.

Anthony Steele said in England that his beautiful fiancee, Anita Ekberg, would not make movies there because "they don't know what to do with a beautiful woman in this country and Anita is too lovely for British studios."

John Wayne is eyeing "Reminiscences of a Cowboy," which John Huston was preparing originally for his father, the late Walter Huston. . . . Debbie Reynolds is No. 1 again in the motion picture popularity poll, which proves that having a baby never hurt a movie star. . . . Spencer Tracy is after the lead in Jerry Wald's picture, "The Last Hurrah." . . . Frank Capra's first film on his own deal at Columbia is a remake of "Lady For a Day."

There was almost a riot when the Lord Provost of Edinburgh left a town council meeting to greet Fess Parker. One of the councilmen asked sarcastically, "Would it be possible to inform us when Marilyn Monroe is coming to the city?" "I wish I knew," sighed Bailie Bruce Russell.

Genevieve Page, David Niven's leading lady in "Silken Affair," is Christian Dior's god-daughter, and the French designer is whipping up a fancy wardrobe for her to wear in the movie.

Linda Darnell and playwright Polan Banks are rediscovering the same old story in New York.

Joe DiMaggio, in town briefly for a visit with his son, dodged reporters because, as he put it, "I have nothing very interesting to say for publication, and what I have that's interesting isn't for publication." Now, what did he mean by that?

Betty Hutton is perking in all directions. She was to "Spring Reunion" . . . her first movie in four years — with Dana Andrews in May. Her new Capitol recording of "Hit the Road to Dreamland" is among the top 10 in New York. And in the planning stage is a filmed TV series for the fall.

Mario Lanza is being tied up for a third picture by Jack Warner, to follow the film now being scripted by Phil Yordan. Louis B. Mayer's representatives have also been talking to Mario about a musical to be made under the Mayer banner.

Vanessa's Theatre Group Has Flag, Motto and Blimp

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—Former Quiz Kid Vanessa Brown thinks in wide circles around her lazier acting colleagues. She is setting Hollywood back on its collective ear with a most ambitious theatre plan.

"We call ourselves 'The American Acting Company'," Vanessa said in her ultra-modern house on a Beverly hilltop. There is very little furniture, huge windows on all sides, an odd-shaped pool, and Vanessa's unusual glittering paintings everywhere.

"We have a theatre in Hollywood, a motto, a flag and a plan. Oh yes, and a blimp. The theatre is on Hollywood Boulevard and we renamed it the American Theatre. The dirigible is to advertise the plays. I've always wanted my own balloon.

"Our motto is, 'It doesn't matter if you get there because when you do, there may not be a there to get to.' The flag will be in spectrum colors and will be round. It will be hoisted every night when a play is on."

Members of Vanessa's group include Ricardo Montalban, Lloyd Bridges, Josanne Betenger, Bonita Granville, Cathy O'Donnell, Ann Rutherford and Mrs. Sam Goldwyn, Jr. But most are unknown youngsters.

"We have a mime class on Monday and the Vanessa group Wednesday at my house, for discussion, reading and development. There are other groups that have nothing to do with acting, but will help our people.

"For instance, we have a class on sex and marriage. I'm sick of being called up in the middle of the night and day to give advice to the lovelorn. I'm looking for someone to run this class.

"A different aspect of sex and marriage will be discussed each week. Yes, boys and girls can attend together, but if it get embarrassing we'll stop, and have classes separately. It's a very necessary subject.

"We have a list of psychiatrists available, so no one has to bring problems to the theatre. We have typing classes and classes for Shakespeare.

But the number one object is the encouragement of new playwrights and new performers. And above all to have a theatre. If Shakespeare didn't have a theatre, he wouldn't have written his plays. My house is available for everything we can't use the theatre for."

June Bustin' Out All Over

"Fresh and alive and gay and young" truly describes this zesty dance interpretation devised by Rod Alexander of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "June Is Bustin' Out All Over" lyrics from "Carousel." The smash hit, now brought to the screen in Twentieth Century-Fox's new CinemaScope 55 process, brings an early spring at the Royal Theatre. Musical stars Gordon MacRae, Shirley Jones with Cameron Mitchell in a cast headed by Barbara Ruick, Claramae Turner, Robert Rounseville and Gene Lockhart.

Young Star of 'Pirates' Has Best of Both Worlds

Marriage or a career is a problem which all girls must solve if they aspire to a musical career.

Ruth New, a new Victorian who has the leading female role in "Pirates of Penzance" next week, is an exception. She believes the two can be combined.

Youthful Mrs. New will sing the role of Mabel in the operetta, which the Gilbert and Sullivan Society will present in the Royal Theatre April 30 and May 1 and 2.

Mrs. New had progressed from starring roles in productions of the Civic Opera in her native Edmonton to scholarship training at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto when she made her vital decision.

She met John New, with the CNR traffic department here since last August, and "I turned down a full scholarship for the next year and decided to get married.

"I like singing but I didn't want to make it my entire life," she said. "You can do both. If you combine marriage and career, it's the best way."

When the News came here with daughter Cathy, now one year old, she "asked around" about musical organizations.

Mrs. New found the G & S Society was planning to produce "Blossom Time," in which she had previously sung. The idea for that show dropped, but Mrs. New auditioned for and won what is considered the most difficult of all Gilbert and Sullivan soprano roles.

Others in the cast will be Norman Tyrell, Alan Robertson, Lex Sutcliffe, Arthur Courville, James Mead-Robins, Vanessa Lax and Eleanor Duff.

Platters' Fame Rests Heavily On Manager

By JIM TAYLOR

The Platters certainly have The Magic Touch, as they say in their latest record, but a great deal of the credit for their rapid rise to fame must go to their manager, Buck Ram.

According to Mercury sales figures, the platters' first release, "Only You," sold 1,000,000 records, their second, "The Great Pretender," sold 2,000,000, and "Magic Touch" is well on its way to the top.

Ram wrote all three songs, the last one in 90 minutes, words and music. If the Platters have the magic touch, then Ram is certainly blessed with the Midas Touch—making money for the people he manages.

Boy, 10, Wins $100,000

NEW YORK (UP) — A 10-year-old schoolboy expert on the stock market won $100,000 last night on a television quiz program.

Leonard Ross of Tujunga, Calif., answered a difficult five-part question about the New York stock exchange to become the fourth person to win the top prize on the NBC program, "The Big Surprise."

Leonard is the son of William Ross, a Los Angeles, Calif., accountant. His mother, Pauline, is a court stenographer.

The boy will have about $33,000 left after paying taxes on his prize. He said he would give quite a bit of it to charity. He also said he would give his father high fidelity phonograph equipment, his mother a tape recorder, and would buy a subscription to the Wall Street Journal for himself.

He said appearing on the show was "the most wonderful experience in my life." He also said he had been invited by a publisher to write a book on the stock market and had two standing offers to join Wall street organizations.

The dark-haired, serious-looking youngster said he was interested in stocks "as a way of people owning a share of American industry."

NORTHERN MISSION

The first Protestant mission in the Peace River district was founded in 1877 by Alfred Garrioch, Winnipeg clergyman.

Crosby Plans 'Blues'

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Bob Crosby is about to sign for the "Pete Kelly's Blues" TV series. Jack Webb decided against doing it, after the lack of critical acclaim when he made the movie.

Blondies come and go, but Dagwood Arthur Lake is still in there pitching. His wife in the "Blondie" TV series will be played by Pamela Britton, with Hal ("The Great Gildersleeve") Perry as the neighbor, and Stuffy Singer and Ann Barnes the two kids. Of course, another canine plays Daisy.

Hugh O'Brian is screaming for a different time slot for his Wyatt Earp. He's tired of opposing Bob Hope, Martha Raye and Milton Berle.

Desi Arnaz bumped into Orson Welles—and how can you avoid that?—in Palm Springs, and 12 minutes later they had made the deal for Desilu to film the new hour-long TV show for the former boy wonder.

Raise Level For Teachers Expert Urges

CALGARY (CP)—A call for immediate restoration of teachers certification standards to their pre-1954 level was voiced here Friday by Dr. M. E. Lazerte, retired dean of the faculty of education of the University of Alberta.

In an address to a one-day conference on teacher recruitment and retential, he said the government should return to higher standards.

Tillicum Outdoor Theatre has three eminently worthwhile movies this week.

Danny Kaye's "Knock on Wood" opens tomorrow. Program switches Thursday to "Escape from Fort Bravo," a western thriller everyone should see, and Kim Novak in "Pushover."

Speaking of Kim Novak, another must is the very satisfying "Picnic," now playing at the Odeon. Following that is Alec Guinness' latest, the comedy "Ladykillers."

For lovers of "horror" pictures, the Dominion Theatre opens Friday with "Invasion of the Body Snatchers" and "Indestructible Man." The twin bill will run for a week because it has been drawing good crowds in all major Canadian cities.

Johnny Guitar a Hit As London Minstrel

LONDON (CP)—Six months ago "Johnny Guitar" was a traveller with no special prospects. Now he's a guitarist, folk song and blues singer and composer. Hence the name "Johnny Guitar."

"I've dropped my real surname for the time being," says the 24-year-old Canadian. "I'll divulge it later, but not just now."

In a basement-cellar coffee bar in London in the Charing Cross district, Johnny sings and strums the guitar until the early hours, entertaining a Bohemian clientele.

"I'm really the manager here," he explains, "but since I taught myself to play the guitar, I entertain, too."

Now he has been spotted by producers. There's a television series in the offing, a radio spot to fill and cabaret and other offers to consider.

Johnny was born in Edmonton and spent most of his childhood moving around Canada. He came to Britain at 14 to complete his education, but went back to Canada three years later. He decided to try his luck in Britain and for one year was a "not too successful salesman" until he became manager of the coffeehar and branched into singing.

Communist Line on U.S. Not Settled

MOSCOW (AP) — A new volume of the Soviet Encyclopedia came out Friday with a 97-page article on the United States.

There were flattering photographs of Miami, Chicago and other cities. Then the article reached back for shots of a 1929 hunger march and for sketches of the underground railway which aided runaway slaves.

Diplomatic observers were struck by the extreme caution with which the article was balanced.

Dine Together

Some 180 boys and their fathers attended a dinner sponsored by the Acti Mets Couples' Club of Metropolitan United church in Pendray hall Friday night. Rev. Laura Butler was speaker.

Aussies Wait TV With Gaping Sets

SYDNEY, Australia (UP)—There is as yet no television in Australia but everybody's getting ready by buying radio-gramophone consoles with a gaping hole where the television tube will fit in.

These radiograms with a hole, a current fad, are significant of the anxiety with which the Australians are looking forward to their own television. Few are asking how much the TV sets will cost that will eventually plug the openings in the consoles.

In fact, those who've asked have not been able to get a straight answer. The reason is simply that not even the manufacturers know what it will be. The first ones are going to be pretty expensive, that's certain.

But it is not certain when, exactly, Australia's own television will start functioning. Four companies which have been granted government licences are feverishly completing preliminary tests and the way things look, the unveiling will be in either mid-year, or September.

The situation is confused. How much space will be necessary for so-called "live" shows?

In anticipation of the granting of licences, Australia's would-be television companies have been buying up all old and cheap American films and early vintage filmed TV shows they could get their hands on.

Will Australians stomach these films, or will they clamor for new films, will they demand their own live theatre?

"HOBSON'S CHOICE"
Starring Charles Laughton, John Mills, Brenda De Banzie
Taken from the famous stage play of the same name, "Hobson's Choice" has become a household word throughout the English-speaking world. Now comes to the screen, direct from England, one of the greatest movies ever produced. For its authenticity and sheer earthy humor, relished most by Lancashire and Yorkshire folk, "Hobson's Choice" is positively unbeatable. In fact, it's a "rale gradely do," if you know what we mean. Filmed at Salford, Manchester and played by characters entirely familiar with their surroundings (Chas. Laughton born in Yorkshire and Brenda De Banzie at Manchester), this cast is a joy to behold. A "Must See" picture which we recommend unreservedly for the whole family. Receives critics' unstinted praise.

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

Greatest bloodless battle of all time will probably be fought this summer in Melbourne. That's where athletes representing the United States of America and the United States of Soviet Russia will come to grips to decide the Olympic Games team [illegible] best of an effort to prove one political system is superior physically to the other.

Preparations for this test of strength have been almost as elaborate as for any war and just about as frantic. Both countries have been doing everything possible to uncover the best available talent and to get it ready for this struggle for prestige. In fact, victory has become so overwhelmingly important that the USA is actually following Russian footsteps in state-sponsored athletics.

American state-sponsored Olympic competitors will be from the armed forces and a pretty penny will be spent in tuning up the outstanding athletes in uniform. Under a law passed last year, up to $900,000 may be spent every four years to prepare Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard athletes for major meets. The way it looks, the whole four-year appropriation will be spent for the Olympics.

There is, for example, the reassembling of the great Navy crew which defeated the Russians, by little more than a length, in winning the Olympic eight-oared championship at the 1952 Olympics. Crew members were brought back to Annapolis from as far away as Hong Kong, along with their families some weeks ago and have been in training ever since in the hope they can become point-winners at Melbourne. It's a long-shot chance and it is costing plenty but it shows just how serious Olympic competition has become.

In other military bases in the USA, service athletes such as sprinters Rod Richard, Lou Jones and Willie Williams, shot-put record-holder Parry O'Brien, hurdler Jack Davis and Lon Spurler, 800-metre hope, have been undergoing rigorous training for Olympic trials.

It's exactly the same thing the Russians have been doing for years and no criticism of these preparations is intended here. However, they again point out that the sensible thing to do would be to make the Olympic Games open to professionals as well as so-called amateurs. And they bring the thought that it's too bad that nothing, actually, will be settled by the winning of the Olympic team championship while the whole purpose of the Games has been lost because the competitors have become nothing more than political pawns.

Random Harvest

Close to 1,000 Victorians are expected to attend the Aberdeen-Everton soccer match at Vancouver's Empire Stadium on June 9 and there should be about 2,000 Vancouver Islanders on hand for the big game if advance ticket sales are any criterion. . . . The crowd should be well over 20,000 and could reach 30,000. . . . Dave Fryatt, secretary of the B.C. Soccer Commission, reports ticket orders from as far south as Los Angeles and from several Prairie cities. The annual Canadian Legion convention, which opens in Vancouver on June 10, should also help swell attendance. . . . One of the men to watch at the match will be Aberdeen's outside right, Graham Leggatt, who is considered by many experts as the best winger in Britain. . . . For the several who have asked, Longacres racing starts on June 8 and the 60-day meeting ends on August 26, date of the $20,000 Longacres Mile. . . . and for horse-racing fans who may have missed it, trainer Noble Threewit recently set what is considered to be a record when he saddled nine successive winners at Tanforan, within a six-day period. Some mathematician figured that a $2 parlay would have returned $15,276,784.50, which is only a mythical figure, of course, inasmuch as the payoff on the last few races wouldn't have amounted to much if someone actually did try the parlay. . . . It's too bad such shows as the Optimist Club's Tournament of Champions couldn't be held at Memorial Arena but the high rental is too much for anything but bigger attractions. Meanwhile, there is nothing doing at the Arena during most summer days. . . . First entries are already in for Victoria's annual summer bonspiel. Last count showed seven rinks entered, including one from Kamloops and one from Vancouver. Date, in case you curlers have forgotten, is July 2-7. . . . Several baseball fans were arguing the other day about the game's greatest individual performance and no one mentioned two spectacular pitching performances in a class by themselves —the successive no-hit, no-run games pitched by Johnny VanderMeer and the 16 shutouts in one season for Grover Alexander.

GUESSING DEPARTMENT: Butler Brothers in today's district soccer, the Dodgers, White Sox and Yankees to win single games in today's major league baseball and other clubs to split doubleheaders, Monday. Victoria High School to win the Colonist Cup. Batting average to date: At bat 84, hits 64, percentage .660.

Best in Tournament

Canadian 139-pound champion in 1955, classy Jimmy Walters of Vancouver was selected Optimist Boy at the conclusion of last night's finals in the second annual Optimist Club's Tournament of Champions at the Central Junior High School gym. Walters Named 'Optimist Boy'; Rugged Action in Final Bouts

Jimmy Walters of Vancouver's South Hill Athletic Club is the new holder of the Optimist Boy Trophy, awarded to the outstanding boxer, in the opinion of a panel of judges, in the Optimist Club's Tourna ment of Champions.

It was a popular victory and was greeted with enthusiasm by the fans who waited for the presentation of prizes last night [illegible] Junior High School.

Walters, who won the Canadian 139-pound championship last year, won the welterweight championship at the Tournament of Champions and flashed form which gives him every chance of representing Canada in his weight division at the Olympic Games this summer in Melbourne.

TOUGH OPPOSITION

Walters got tough opposition last night from Portland's Dale Nicely, a southpaw slugger who holds the Oregon 139-pound title, but there were no doubts about the merits of the decision.

A clever defensive fighter, Walters covered up neatly and proved an elusive target for Nicely's dangerous southpaw uppercuts. Walters countered neatly and floored Nicely just at the bell ending the second round.

Walters reached the final on Friday night with an impressive win over Bill "Squeaks" Weisberger, scrappy RCN entrant.

FEW DULL MOMENTS

Last night's bouts once again [illegible] fight fans love. Dull moments were few and far between as the youngsters showed a willingness to mix it up and several bouts last night will be long remembered.

Perhaps the one which will stand out longest was the heavyweight final, which ended the two-day tournament in appropriate fashion.

Bruce Olson, a huge Portlander, said to weigh in at about 250 pounds, was pitted against a much-trimmer Bob Stratman, a Seattle entry who was dwarfed despite the fact he weighed in at close to 200 pounds.

TEST OF ENDURANCE

Stratman elected to slug it out with the ponderous Olson and action reached a climax in the third round, when the big fellows stood toe to toe and exchanged blockbusters until the final bell finally brought a halt to the test of endurance.

Olson, who scored repeatedly with a stiff left jab, earned the decision he received.

Sharing honors with the heavyweight final was the all-Japanese flyweight final between Tommy Tackao of Kent, Washington, and Richard Murickami of Salt Spring Island.

FAN FAVORITE

Murickami, who must have been outweighed by about eight pounds, turned out to be the most popular of all if the fan support he received was any criterion. The tiny gamecock took the best shots of the sturdier Tackao and flurried back like a real pro every time he was stung. He had a big moment in the third round when he caught Tackao coming in with a roundhouse left which bloodied the Kent fighter's nose.

Tackao clearly earned the decision but there was some disappointment when Murickami wasn't awarded the trophy as the gamest loser. It went to Gary Oakden of Vancouver, who was floored three times by Wilbur Young in a middleweight semi-final before the fight was stopped at 1:48 of the first round.

Another excellent fight came in the light-heavyweight final in which Seattle's Jim Robertson, 1955 West Coast College champion who finished third in the United States AAU finals this year, got the nod over Willis Mitchell of Seattle.

RUGGED BATTLE

It was action from start to finish in a rugged scrap in which Robertson had a clear edge with his heavier punching.

Young, runner-up in this year's AAU final, was upset in the middleweight final by Portland's Harvey Burke, a clever, hard-to-hit fighter who managed to avoid being tagged by his hard-hitting opponent. It was a close scrap with the decision a bit of a surprise to many, but also popular with fans, who took a liking to Burke.

Bobby Hicks, last year's Optimist Boy who received a controversial decision Friday night, was far too good for Portland's Dave Peters in the light-weight final and won by a TKO after 85 seconds. Peters had one good flurry before Hicks got the upper hand.

KIRBY WINS

Rip Kirby, a RCN entrant, brought Victoria its only title when he outpointed Wade Knisely of Seattle in the light-middleweight final. Classy Brian O'Hare lost out to Vancouver's Jimmy Phillips in a close fight in the bantamweight final.

Harold Manns of Vancouver, got two chances to win a championship and he didn't muff the second one. He lost a tough decision to clubmate Kurt Max in the semi-final match but Max broke his right hand and officials sent Mann into the final against Willie Azzi, also of Vancouver.

Mann carried the fight in determined fashion and was clearly the winner. He drew a real round of applause at the prize presentation when he handed over the sweater given to the winners, in addition to the championship trophy, to Max.

Results of finals in all weight classes follow:

As' 13-Run Inning Crushes White Sox

By CARL LUNDQUIST

Kansas City Athletics, waiting just a year for revenge, took it out on Chicago White Sox Saturday with a 13-run, record-breaking second-inning rally and went on to win 15-1 behind the one-hit pitching of Art Ditmar.

A year ago on this corresponding Saturday, the White Sox massacred the Athletics, 29-6, at Kansas City and yesterday the A's got even in the same park.

TWO DOWN

What made the rally all the more remarkable was that it occurred with two men out. The A's batted around twice and knocked out three pitchers, Spook Jacobs and Harry Simpson each got two hits in the big inning and Gus Zernial drew a walk and a single. Joe Ginsberg hit a triple.

Ditmar yielded his lone hit to catcher Earl Battey in the fourth inning. No other American League club in history ever had scored 13 runs in the second inning.

There were wild ball games all over the American League. At New York the Yankees took an 8-0 lead against Boston, blew it all and trailed 10-9, then finally won 14-10 with a five-run rally in the eighth.

The Tigers gained their first victory of the season, 7-6, at Cleveland in a game in which 12 Indians and 11 Detroiters drew walks. Washington smacked down Baltimore, 8-4.

O

In the National League, Bob Friend pitched a three-hitter to give the Pirates a 3-1 victory over the Dodgers at Pittsburgh, the Cubs edged Cincinnati, 3-2, in 11 innings on Jim King's base-laden single, and the Cardinals handed Milwaukee its first defeat, 6-5. The Giants and Phillies were idle.

SEVEN HOMERS

There were seven homers in the Yankee-Red Sox fracas, Yogi Berra's blast in the eighth inning tying the score at 10-10. Hank Bauer and Mickey Mantle also homered for New York while Faye Throneberry, Mickey Vernon, Jim Piersall and Pete Daley hit Boston homers.

The Tigers put on a three-hour-and-16-minute marathon with the Indians, piling up a 7-1 margin which their starter, bonus boy Bob Miller couldn't hold.

Al Aber came in when Cleveland scored four times in the seventh and stopped the rally, then held the Indians off the rest of the way for his first win. Frank House hit a Detroit homer.

King's game-winning hit provided Cub reliever Jim Davis with his first victory of the campaign. Russ Meyer pitched the first nine innings for the Cubs and except for homers by Ted Kluszewski and Wally Post turned in a creditable performance.

Whitney's Head Man Wins Wood Memorial

NEW YORK (UP) — C. V. Whitney's Head Man, a leading candidate for the Kentucky derby, won the $61,000 Wood Memorial on a foul Saturday after finishing two and one-half lengths behind Golf Ace before a crowd of 39,673 at Jamaica.

With jockey Eddie Arcaro riding, Head Man made his bid from third place at the head of the stretch, but as the husky son of Eight Thirty charged through the straightway, Golf Ace continually drifted out in front of the Whitney runner.

STARTED DRIVE

Arcaro, who started his drive by taking Head Man to the outside of the leaders, then had to steer his mount to the inside and lost all opportunity of winning New York's final prep for Kentucky derby candidates.

Under the new foul rule put into effect in New York only yesterday, Golf Ace was placed second in the mile and one-eighth race. Mrs. Wallace Gilroy's Oh Johnny was third, four and one-half lengths behind Head Man at the finish. Then came High King, Nail, Tellarian, Jean Baptiste and Beam Rider. Gun Shot was scratched and jockey Johnny Adams, who flew into New York from Kentucky for the race, flew back again.

Strathconas Down Pilseners To Gain Province Cup Final

Victoria Strathconas moved into the final round of the Province Cup soccer competition yesterday afternoon by defeating Pilseners, 4-2, before 792 fans at Royal Athletic park.

Strathconas first Victoria club to reach the provincial final since 1945 when Victoria West upset St. Saviors in the semis and then dropped a 6-2 decision to Vancouver Hale-cos in the provincial final are scheduled to meet Halecos for the title at Vancouver next Saturday.

Outplaying the Vancouver club most of the way, the Straths moved into a 2-1 half-time lead. They faltered in the early stages of the second half as the Pils knotted the count but were again in command during the late exchanges to fully merit the victory.

Tommy Draper with two goals, George Wright and Willie Hamilton took care of the Strathcona scoring while Fred Whittaker and Bob Swanton each counted once for the visitors.

While the Straths turned in a solid team effort most of the way it was probably the excellent play of their halfbacks Harold Holroyd, Joe Robbins and Hamilton that made the difference against the alert Pils.

Straths had the Pilseners on the run with a pleasing short passing attack that created many a flash of good scoring chances but the strikers often bogged down after impressing become one halfbacks. In other opportunities it took some good work by the Pilsener backs, particularly Ed Mc-Neil and goalie Ian Kinnon to hold down the Victoria total.

ANXIOUS MOMENTS

Although forced to yield an advantage in territorial play the Pils were always dangerous and could easily have picked up another couple of goals. Their eagerness and the prowess of the Victoria backs, one of the Pils scored several times for offsides that were questionable decisions by referee Peter McEachern of Hals and Pete Fowles of James Bay were also banished for fighting, leaving James Bay with 10 men and Hals with 12.

Ray Ramsey of James Bay had his nose broken in a hard tackle midway in the half and was taken to hospital, leaving the teams with 12 men each.

Gords Mitchell charged over for Hals to push the score to 3-2. Gary Dyno had his knee mauled in a tackle near the touchline and had to leave the game but despite being a man short James Bay launched a strong attack which ended in Pat Cornell registering the final try.

VIEWS OF SPORT

By Red Smith

NEW YORK—During the Second World War when the baseball clubs were doing the best they could the Giants got tangled up same as anybody else. In 1942 they sat down [illegible] to finish third with an infield manned by Jack Baker, Mickey Wade, Bill Jurges and Johnny Mize but Baker and Jurges were getting on in years and before the next season started Mize was in the navy. They say [illegible] Rudolph Camilli to pay first base.

Camilli refused to report. A San Francisco member of [illegible] an offer to manage Oakland. The Giants scraped around a little choice in the matter. The club's scouting [illegible] for an infielder named Bob Rigney, [illegible] on the service. It didn't seem much of a deal [illegible]

Three years went by before Rigney showed up [illegible] York uniform. On the Coast they had turned [illegible] could throw but something just happened [illegible] the arm he brought to camp in Modesto [illegible] He was a useful guy, the sort who could [illegible] at second base, at third or at shortstop and pick his weight as a pinch hitter. In 1947 when the Giants shattered the records with 221 home runs Rigney hit 17.

He wasn't a great player, but it's an odd thing that some fellows who aren't great make a special impression and a place for themselves. When deals are made they don't get traded away because the boss figures that here's a guy he wants around for a while, a guy with a future.

You Start with Character

Bill Rigney has come back to the Polo Grounds as manager of the Giants. It's a job that carries some distinction. As Casey Schoumacher has observed, more guys get elected president of the United States than get chosen manager of the Giants. There've been only five managers in 50 years.

What is it about a utility infielder that makes the people around him say, "This fellow is going to be a manager some day"? It must be character to start with. After that there are the other things—a lively, inquiring, supple mind, an authoritarian for the game, a talent for getting on with people, the quality of sincerity.

Chances are Horace Stoneham, who owns the Giants, couldn't cite a date if he were asked just when it was he decided Bill Rigney had the stuff managers are made of. It was a while back though, because as early as 1953 Horace offered Rigney a shot at managing Chuck Dressen who was running the Minneapolis farm fell sick and Rigney was invited to take over. He declined.

Stoneham was a bit miffed at that but Rigney had an explanation that satisfied the boss. He said he'd like an overall job as manager if it were his own club, he wasn't interested in filling in for somebody else. So Hand [illegible] coming for [illegible] out the year in Minneapolis and then came back to New York where he preferred to be.

Who's on First?

The following year Rigney went to Minneapolis on his own and did all right. That was 1954. In 1955 his team won everything—the American Association pennant, the playoff, eight straight games, the Little World Series. That's got little to do with this discussion though, because before he brought off that coup he'd been universally accepted as the heir apparent to Leo Durocher's job.

When he went to camp in Phoenix, Ariz., two months ago he was asking the same questions as everybody else: Who's on first? Who'll play second, third, left field? Who'll pitch? Who'll catch?

Once in a while there's a manager goes to camp asking all those questions, but usually he's with a club that expects to finish last. Usually it's a guy fixed like Chuck Dressen in Washington with a team so bad that anybody who shows anything can win any position. It hardly ever happens with a team like the Giants who are supposed to be pennant contenders.

It happened with Rigney this year. He knew about A. Dark at shortstop, Willie Mays in centre field and Don Mueller in right. All other positions were open. The way he has dealt with those openings has taught his employers a few things about Rigney.

Day of Decision

They used to get impatient with Durocher because Leo resented the rule limiting his squad to 25 players, he'd have carried and used 30 or 35 if were possible. The theory cried this spring that Rigney was perhaps even more interested than Durocher to let a man go.

That's easy to understand. This is Rig's first year. He wants to make as few mistakes as possible, so before making a decision he wants to collect as much evidence as possible. Also, and here he is talking about his players rather than his own job, he wants to give every man every possible chance to win a place in the big league.

At the same time, though, even while he puts off decisions about individual players, he manages to establish [illegible] on the bench. Many of the [illegible] had a spring workout for him in Minneapolis were working there when he made a crucial decision.

There was a time last year when the team was going poorly and he thought some guys were mailing on him. You write some horses and they respond get [illegible] others run they seek. Rigney took the gamble and fined four guys $50 apiece. They woke up and hustled for him and he won everything.

He believes he got to be a real manager when he made that decision. Could be he did.

Seattle Golfers Win Empress Golf Titles

Seattle golfers won major honors in the Empress golf tournament but the second score was one year yesterday as the 26th edition of the week-long event wound up in breezy weather at the Victoria Golf Club.

Ken Lindley, the 1949 champion won the Sir Edward Beatty Trophy for the second time by edging Dave Coons of Vancouver Wash. at the 18th green. Mrs. R. F. Fraser, Seattle created Mrs. O. W. Smith as the women's champion by besting Mrs. H. G. MacKenzie of Victoria 3 and 2.

RALLIES TO WIN

Lindley, a seven-handicapper from the Broadmoor club who received one stroke from his veteran opponent, rallied on the back nine with the help of a puzzling putter to grab the victory. Trailing by two holes at the turn, Lindley won the 12th and 15th holes to square the match then dropped a four-foot putt on the final green for a birdie three.

Mrs. MacKenzie was all square with her opponent a semi-finalist last year after eight holes but she dropped one behind when she three-putted the ninth green. Mrs. MacKenzie was up-and-up at the Crescent club course's 14th and dropped the 15th when she drove out of bounds but scrambled back with a win on the 16th. However Mrs. Fraser took the 16th hole to close out the match.

Two Victoria men, fighting championship but three other Vancouver golfers went down to defeat. Bill McColl of Victoria gave away 16 strokes took first flight honors by besting A. Olson of Mt. Vernon 3 and 1.

As the fuel charge burns in one end of the cylinder, it shoves the piston assembly down to the other end, ramming hot gases out to drive the turbine.

However, since conventional piston engines still have quite a bit of development ahead before their design is all played out, and since turbine engines are the fast-growing up glamour girls of the automotive future it seems probable that the promising free piston type will be bypassed.

Crossing the Sahara Still Somewhat Risky

BY DAVID BROWN

[illegible] crossing [illegible] of expensive and exciting [illegible] tours [illegible] are the attractions of a [illegible]

[illegible] Sahara [illegible] are the mapped [illegible] the glowing desert [illegible] trade.

Save for the months from mid-May to October, when the desert is closed to travel, the temperature in the Sahara is surprisingly comfortable. In fact the nights are often cold and a fire necessary.

The Sahara is one of the largest and emptiest expanses of territory in the world. Its area of 3,000,000 square miles makes it nearly as large as Canada. Yet barely 2,000,000 persons inhabit the vast area. More so than the Mediterranean, the Sahara serves as a barrier between Europe and Africa.

This barren emptiness gives the Sahara much of its distinctive appeal.

There are three routes cutting across the Sahara from north to south in French Africa. Operating normal caravan times these routes [illegible] for vehicular traffic are known as the [illegible] Routes numbers 1, 2 and 3.

The first stretches 1,776 miles from Algiers in southern Morocco to Ouargla on the western bulge of the continent. The second, also known as the Tanezrouft route, connects Colomb-Bechar in the northwest Algeria to Algiers [illegible] Fort de West Africa.

Of the three tracks in the French Sahara, the middle or Tanezrouft route is the easiest to negotiate by car and is the most [illegible] has the shortest length. The other two are far more dangerous with more sandy stretches to cross and fewer water and gasoline points.

Crossing the desert by land is still an undertaking some what on the adventurous side, although the French Foreign Legion as well as private transport companies have done much to ease the difficulties of trans-Sahara travel. Between 300 and 400 vehicles annually cross the Sahara in the October-May period.

Drivers must carry six different documents, among which is a repatriation guarantee and bronze token-coupon. This is necessary to defray the expenses of search and rescue sought the car breaks down or the driver or passengers fall ill or meet with an accident.

In case engine the greatest care where to the Sahara [illegible] made. When leaving it necessary to [illegible] to report to the various administrative posts along the route and to advise the following post of the estimated time of [illegible] Failure to reach [illegible] of this rule means the [illegible] search of a rescue [illegible]

Spare parts such as extra tires and tubes, fan belt, spark plugs, cylinder head and flexible connection piping should be carried as well as sufficient water and gas and oil reserves.

Gas varies in price according to the distance within the desert. Ethyl [illegible] and [illegible] Algiers to $1.10 Imperial [illegible] and Gasoline. Oil varies in prices from [illegible] under 50 cents to $1.28 a quart.

A quicker way to cross the Sahara and its wonders is of course by the many [illegible] operations. [illegible] Air France operates [illegible] Algiers and [illegible] Colomb-Bechar which calls at a number of Saharan oases such as Ghardaia, Adrar, El Golea and Tamanrasset.

Bosie Stayed at the Ritz

DOGS, particularly city dogs, enjoy vacations as much as humans. It is the one time of year when master and dog can spend unlimited time together, fishing, walking, mucking about in the water and just plain lounging.

DID YOU KNOW . . .

That on two outstanding occasions in the life of Queen Victoria, dogs were in her mind. After her coronation ceremony, she retired to her private palace apartments, removed her state clothing, and gave her dog a bath. When she died, her favorite Pomeranian was on her bed.

From My Mailbag

Mrs. Harold A. Davies, 1611 Vantreight Drive, Box 2139, RR 5, Victoria, writes:

"... I certainly agree that the mystery of bird migration has not yet been solved. Hochbaum's key phrase, 'The beginning and ending of the annual migration is a learned place,' seems to be another instance of applying a theory deducted from one aspect of a problem to the whole picture.

"This theory could perhaps be correctly applied in some cases but definitely not in others. Young birds which accompany their parents on the flight south could 'learn' the southern home and the route. There are, however, a number of species in which the young do not accompany the adults, but either precede or follow them later; they would have no opportunity to learn the route or stopping place from the older ones. Also some species fly for many miles over monotonous seas to little oceanic islands, or for days through heavy mist or fog, with no signposts to chart their course. So there is obviously more to it than a 'learned' experience. . . ."

Things Happening Out Great Neck Way...

BY RING LARDNER

TO THE EDITOR.

It is a long while since I gave you any local items in regard to Great Neck and other suburbs West there isn't much of anything happened only that the Yuletide season is long since past and all the presents we give the kiddies is long since either broken or worn to pieces or they have forgot all about them except the one present which we kind of hoped would be broke to pieces or forgot about namely the radio. The last radio we had was a combined radio and phonograph as it did not work only about once out of every 10 times. This one works perfect all the time and it is hard to tell which is the worst nuisance.

Gene Buck and family is safely quartered in their new home which is only located across the st from where they use to live. They former residence was what you might term a stone's throw but equipped with cars one why the old domicile might as well be in Europe. From one end of the village to the other is a matter of 10 or 15 minutes and in fair cold weather could walk it in 20 or 25 minutes without half trying. In good clean old fashioned snow we have to use the sleds. Last winter was the first time in 2 years that we had enough snow to speak of and then it was only a couple of inches.

"Comeback" Unhappy Term, Says Imogene

By MARGARET McMANUS

NEW YORK, N.Y.—This is an important spring for Imogene Coca. Following the fanfare of her publicized "return" to television on the Max Liebman spectacular some weeks ago, Miss Coca made her first dramatic appearance on television Wednesday, April 11, on the United States Steel Hour.

She starred in the role of a television actress in Fredric Hazlitt Brown's "Joy Ride," by Mel Goldberg, but she refuses to say that her part is just autobiographical.

Miss Coca, who greeted me with large brown eyes expressive of being just sure, said she really isn't certain what her reception was to her first television show after such a long absence.

She said she only knows that she did enjoy the medium which presented her with such a lavish gift of fame as a comedienne versus the comedienne, and that she was very happy to be working again with Max Liebman.

I'm still too close to it to have any factual conclusions to draw," she said. "I don't classify my impressions. I have no position to."

LONG ABSENCE

Miss Coca, who had been missing from television for almost a year, said that working with Max Liebman is a pleasure. "He's a perfectionist and

Skirt, Sweater Uniform Wear Of Victorians

BY EILEEN LEAROYD

The Victoria fashion story is a two-piece outfit. The skirt and the sweater.

Much is written about fashion here and a good cross section of design from East and South finds its way to the Island for local purchase.

But let's face the truth. The basis, foundation and the uniform of Victoria women is—the skirt and sweater.

In countless variations this costume finds its way to morning shirty parties to shopping expeditions and even to afternoon teas and evenings out.

In Victoria with its cosmopolitan warm-winter existence, the skirt and sweater is just wear and always acceptable. When in doubt, a skirt and sweater is worn and the style we have given skirt-and-sweater-shape treatments four and five times on file.

In the spring the birds and beasts moult and get shiny new coats and feathers—not us, the women of Victoria. We carry right on, hardly losing a step while we change from dark colored sweaters to light colored ones.

While women of hotter climes switch to silks and nylons, we just whoosh out of our tartan kilts into lighter wool pastel numbers.

Weather-wise we are, and have to be. As the rolls and rows that face to windward cover themselves with moss, we cover ourselves with the aforementioned two-piece garments.

Well, while we are about the business of purchasing our native costume, we might as well choose the prettiest we can get.

Mrs. Dayle Wood who lives high on a windy hill, dressed as today's lovely, tall and slim mode.

Mrs. Wood's address is 1050 Mayfair Drive, which she lives with her husband and her two-year-old daughter, Sharon. She is an R.N., graduate of the Vancouver General and worked at the Jubilee Hospital for some time. In Vancouver she was on the staff at the Grace Clinic.

In the first picture, Mrs. Wood wears a lovely elm green matching skirt and sweater combination. These articles, in a local shop, are so beautifully dye-matched that one's first impression is that the costume is a one piece dress.

The sweater is a Jockey Pixie Pan [illegible] and the [illegible] skirt is [illegible] The sweater is [illegible] and the white Jockey sweater is [illegible]

The versatile skirt suitable for so many occasions gives its wearer the additional bonus of being pretty and feminine.

Her marriage to the late King George II of Greece was dissolved 20 years ago. She has very little money and since 1950 has shared a 50 room villa at Cannes with the Marquis.

"I was 26 and just starting [illegible] when I met her at a dinner given by the Marquis de Cuevas," he says. "As I kissed her hand and then looked into her eyes something happened to me. I realized that this wonderful woman desperately needed my help and devotion.

Chemical Firm Turns Corner

Canadian Chemical and Cellulose which has been operating at a loss since its inception was yesterday reported to be working on a profitable basis in the first quarter of 1956.

Statement was made by M. W. MacKenzie, president at the company's annual meeting in Montreal. Sales were increasing and operating costs declining. A semi-annual report giving the figures will be made later in the year.

Winds Thwart Muir

Rough wind-swept seas in the Strait of Juan de Fuca prevented Bill Muir from entering the water on a practice swim yesterday.

The swim party was unable to return to Victoria last night because of rough weather out of Port Angeles.

After finding a swim attempt hopeless the party checked tides from Race Rocks to Port Angeles.

"We found the tides at Race Rocks exactly the way we hoped," navigator Bud Phillips told the Daily Colonist from Port Angeles last night.

Tides should be favorable for the attempt on the strait by Muir Wednesday, he added.

Jobless List Grows

Continued improvement in the Victoria employment situation was experienced during the past week, C. A. Mudge of the National Employment Office said last night.

This week's list of 1,510 unemployed men is the lowest figure for the same week for any year since the end of the Second World War with exception of 1951.

Openings for graduate engineers, qualified boilermakers and carpenters are a few of the many vacancies noted with the steadily increasing work in this area.

In the women's section, the demand for domestic workers has increased and the number of vacancies for waitresses is increasing.

Other offices report vacancies for draughtsmen, power linemen, machinists, managers and an assortment of other jobs.

Concert Given High Praise

GANGES—The Mahon Hall was well filled recently when the Salt Spring Island Choral Society ably conducted by Mrs. G. B. Young presented its 20th annual concert before an enthusiastic audience. The concert was considered one of the best given by the society.

As one of the guest artists, Mrs. Warren Hastings delighted her audience with her two pianoforte solos; the two young pianists, Miss Moira Bond and Dorothy Dodds, received well merited applause and Miss Sperrial with her vocal solos and Mrs. A. W. Larmour violinist, were also well received.

Hero of Millions of Words

Merriwell 60 Years Old

WASHINGTON (NANA)—Frank Merriwell, fictional idol of American youth, was "born" just 60 years ago.

Acme of sportsmanship and clean living, Merriwell raced through millions of words in [illegible] and syndicated columns, winning baseball games with last-inning home runs, galloping to spectacular touchdowns as the final gun barked and foiling scores of villains at the crucial moment.

His exploits in the "waning moments" of whatever endeavor he undertook led to the expression, "Merriwell finish."

Merriwell was the brain-child of William Gilbert Patten, who, under the pseudonym Burt L. Standish, was to become one of the world's most prolific storytellers.

Patten's hero came into existence after the publishing firm of Street and Smith suggested a possible juvenile series based on the exploits of a fabulous sports character. In four days Patten had whipped out his first 20,000-word story in which Frank Merriwell was the hero supreme. The tale was ready for submission April 18, 1896.

That was the beginning of 17 years of Merriwell adventures which appeared first in Street and Smith's Tip Top Weekly and then in paperback books, each containing four of the 20,000-word Tip Top stories.

Under a contract which gave the publishers full claim to his pen name, his Merriwell and his stories, Patten was committed to producing a complete 20,000-word adventure every seven days.

For this he received the munificent sum of $50 a week. Seventeen years and almost 20,000,000 words later, he was still turning out his weekly quota, though his salary had tripled.

Patten created 832 Merriwell tales of derring-do which reappeared in 208 paperbacks. He was producing 415 other nickel novels and 25 cloth-bound volumes featuring other cavorting heroes for an over-all total of 40,000,000 words.

Patten had many problems during the Merriwell series. First, he had to keep Frank in the Fardale prep school and at Yale University the proper number of years. Then he had to keep track of the long list of characters entering and departing the series.

Though he didn't receive a single cent in royalties for the Merriwell series, Patten need not be pitied. Following 1913 he became an editor, a Hollywood scenarist and a voluminous contributor to pulp magazines.

There is virtually no way of ascertaining the lifetime wordage output of this amazing storyteller. He sold his first two short stories for $3 each to a New York weekly during his late teens.

The young man from Corinna, Me., sold his first baseball novel for $50 and from that point on words gushed from his pen for more than half a century.

UBC To Run Island Farm for Research

Students Paid To Learn

This is one of the biggest, most expensive and most modern barns on Vancouver Island. It is at Oyster river and will be used for research and study by UBC students. As well as cattle, a herd of 50 deer will be housed in the barn for nutrition experiments.—(Colonist photo by Alec Merriman.)

By ALEC MERRIMAN

One of the finest farms on Vancouver Island will be used this year as a research farm for the the University of British Columbia.

It is the 1,700-acre, $500,000 farm at Oyster River owned by Byron Montford of Ontario, and leased to UBC.

It will be used as a beef cattle ranch and to study hog production, and eventually it is planned to establish the farm on a paying basis.

Ten agriculture students from UBC will arrive at the farm May 1 and with them will be a graduate of this year's class, who will act as farm manager. All students will receive pay while learning to become farmers. They will work five days a week [illegible] hours a day.

In addition to the agriculture students, two zoology students will stay on the farm to study nutrition and breeding habits of deer.

For their experiments they will keep a herd of 50 deer in one of the barns. It is thought likely they will also keep some bear for experimental purposes.

Forestry students will also make the farm a headquarters.

The Oyster river farm is the second in a projected chain of farms the UBC plans on a province-wide basis.

There is already a dairy farm on the campus, but it is a much smaller proposition than the Island farm. In the planning stages are a fruit farm in the Okanagan and a beeef ranch in the Cariboo.

Permanent farm manager at Oyster river is Leo Kanski, who won an agriculture degree in his native Czechoslovakia and then went on to win his BSA and MSA at UBC.

The farm was taken over by the university 18 months ago with $35,000 worth of livestock. Building up of the stock is now in process and on the farm are 250 head of cattle and about 80 pigs.

UBC would like to have 300 cows (Shorthorns, Herefords and Aberdeen Angus), all purebred stock, and 200 sows.

Next fall about 100 head of cattle will be sold to make room for purebred stock.

On the farm are two of the largest and most modern barns on Vancouver island. One barn has six silos.

Director of the farm is Dr. A. J. Wood of UBC and he and other professors will make regular visits to instruct the students.

Breeding and nutrition experiments will form a big part of the program.

Use of aureomycin on newborn calves, to stop scours and increase rate of growth, is a current experiment.

Wheels-Down Water Landing Flips Plane; Pilot Escapes

NANAIMO — Allan Tuck escaped drowning and serious injuries yesterday when the $40,000 Cessna 1-80 he was landing on Nanaimo harbor somersaulted and sank.

The four-passenger machine flipped over on its back when the wheels of the amphibian, which had not been withdrawn for a water landing, hit the water. It immediately sank but was prevented from dropping to the sea bed by its pontoons.

Tuck fought his way out of the submerged cabin and clambered up on one of the pontoons until rescued by one of the many tugs which rushed to the scene within seconds of the accident.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tuck of 959 Wentworth, the pilot was bringing the Cessna from Cassidy airport to pick up a passenger.

Eye-witnesses said the accident appeared to have occurred because the wheels on the plane were not pulled up after taking off from Cassidy airport.

Both the pilot and the submerged craft were towed into the Nanaimo Assembly Wharf by the tug Gulf Yarder, skippered by Bill Greenfield.

The Cessna is owned by Emil Deering of Lynburn crescent, Nanaimo.

Tuck had been flying for Deering for the last two weeks. He only recently obtained his pilot's licence.

It was estimated that repairs to the plane would cost several thousand dollars.

Crunched under a runaway 70-ton railway coal car in a Victoria West coal yard yesterday, this parked car owned by the yard manager, A. A. 'Not Losing Cold War'

Eisenhower Proposes Anti-Red 'Brain Trust'

Stevenson Raps Policy 'Stumbling'

BY JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower called Saturday night for the creation of a sort of brain trust to advise the government in the global struggle with communism.

At the same time he disputed charges that the United States is losing the cold war.

He recited what he called a string of "cold war victories" although he declared that if the United States does not "keep ahead of the job," then "we are bound to lose."

His remarks, which came in an off-the-cuff addition to a prepared speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, were obviously aimed at such critics as Adlai Stevenson, who only Saturday lambasted the administration foreign policy.

Stevenson, addressing a luncheon meeting of the editors, declared the administration has "drifted and stumbled" in foreign affairs. It has "lost the moral initiative" he said, and is also losing "the military advantage" to the communists. He called, among other things, for a halt on H-bomb tests to demonstrate American leadership in the cause of peace.

Also Saturday, a poll of about 80 editors attending a breakfast session showed them voicing the opinion 2-1 that the United States is losing the cold war. Guests present, who included government officials, shared the same views, though by a lesser margin.

To help keep American foreign policy abreast of changing times, the President suggested a kind of council of wise men—a "rotating advisory board" of private citizens, he called it.

They would be free of the responsibilities of office, he said, and would be able to "devote their brains to the job."

'Expanding Freedom'

He did not go into details, but a high official indicated the President has in mind moving to set up a council of "the best brains available, regardless of party."

"Our nation is called to leadership, . . in the world," the President said, "to keep expanding our areas of freedom and not allow the communist cloud to engulf us little by little."

He said the American people must be given "the naked truth" free of "demagoguery and partisanship."

In his prepared speech, he challenged the present leaders of Russia to prove their peaceful intentions and desire for better relations with the rest of the world by abolishing "the wrongs of Stalin." Among these wrongs he mentioned the continued division of Germany and Korea.

In the course of his impromptu remarks which came after the broadcast of his formal speech, he made an emphatic appeal for an understanding of the needs of Japan for trade.

He said that in greater or less degree the same kind of reasoning applies to other countries. He mentioned Britain, France and Germany.

He appealed for understanding by Americans of countries which engage in trade with communist nations and he said that in working out the whole complex problem of trade and economic relationships "we have a real job."

In exercising the leadership of the United States, he said, it is not enough that the executive and the congress should understand what has to be done and do it—"every citizen has a job he cannot delegate."

Eisenhower began his informal comments by saying that he had heard only Saturday, a poll taken at a breakfast session held in connection with the editors' convention showed editors expressing the opinion, 54-27, that the United States is losing the cold war.

Using Less Force

Every day, Eisenhower said, someone says that "we're losing the cold war" but he has also heard others take exactly the opposite line.

The Soviets, he said, set out to conquer the world using such methods as "lies, deceit and war if necessary." Their aim has not changed, he said, but they are depending less on force.

Eisenhower said the communists did not conquer Korea, they were stopped in northern Vietnam, the Iranian situation has eased, the Egyptian-British argument over Suez has been settled, the Trieste problem has been settled and the "first bridgehead" of communism in the western hemisphere "has been thrown out." This evidently was a reference to Guatemala.

The president said a Soviet government "genuinely devoted" to the legitimate interests of Russia "can have friendly relations with the United States and the free world for the asking."

But the president declared that the major international issues of the post-war world are still unsolved despite the switch from Stalinist to a "collective" dictatorship in Russia.

"More basic changes in Soviet policy will have to take place before the free nations can afford to relax their vigilance."

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER

ADLAI STEVENSON

Flood Peril Rising

WINNIPEG (BUP) — A terse new forecast outlining the surprise possibility of a highest-in-history flood crest on the Red river galvanized Greater Winnipeg flood protection committee officials into swift action yesterday.

Committee director Carson Templeton immediately ordered the wraps taken off a carefully-prepared blueprint for protection of the metropolitan area. He put the plan into its first protective motion by assigning dragline crews and contractors to stand by for dike-building Monday if necessary.

The step was taken moments after a special meeting of the Manitoba flood forecasting committee issued a late bulletin reflecting a sudden change for the worse in the flood threat around Winnipeg.

The forecast said the peak crest of the Red now was expected to sweep into this city May 7, and might be at 33 feet, three feet higher than that attained during the disastrous flood of 1950.

The forecast said it appeared more likely, however, that the crest would be somewhere between 27 and 30 feet.

In 1950, the river inundated large sections of Greater Winnipeg and caused millions of dollars in damage.

Carnival Spirit

Poor Old Joe! Chant Greets B&K at Oxford

OXFORD, England (AP)—"Poor Old Joe! Poor Old Joe!" It rang like a gong Saturday in the heads of Premier Bulganin and communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev. Oxford students started this chant shortly after the visiting Red leaders hit town and they boomed it out until they left.

They were on their way to visit Sir Anthony Eden's country house.

Neither Russian speaks English but the students made their point apparent. They were chanting a boisterous liturgy for the downgrading of Stalin by the current Soviet government.

In Moscow there's no telling what would follow such a gag—if anybody was fool enough to try it.

But Bulganin and Khrushchev just grinned and took it like soldiers.

Fortunately for their eardrums the tour of Oxford was as fast as a man running for a bus. They popped in here, there, everywhere and then whirled away. Echoing after them was the rowdy refrain: "Poor . . . old . . . Joe!"

There were 10,000 people on hand when the B and K motorcade pulled into town and a good 4,000 of them were students. They set the tone of greeting: Genial derision, like a crowd cheering the ice sweepers at a hockey match.

It was a carnival day for the students. They booed, cheered, roared their monotonous chant, and one young man unfurled a giant Union Jack and waved it from a pole.

Bulganin and Khrushchev stood on the town hall steps, waving their hats and grinning broadly.

At one place the crowd got impatient. They bellowed "poor old Joe," and interspersed it with "why are we waiting?"

Finally a clear voice demanded in an accent peculiar to Oxford scholars:

"Come on Bulgy—I want my tea!"

ROMAN WELCOME

The Russians tried to rise to the occasion. Once amid the furor Bulganin clasped his hand over his head like a boxer. Khrushchev waved excitedly. To men who speak no English it must have seemed like a Roman welcome.

The Russian visitors were startled to find portraits of discredited Josef Stalin and purged secret police chief Lavrentia Beria facing them as they entered a college hall. Below were two much smaller pictures of Bulganin and Khrushchev with a banner emblazoned "Glory to Stalin." College officials explained it was a student prank.

They managed a peek at one historical bit with Russian background. Oxford officials showed them an engraving depicting a scene July 15, 1814, when the czar of Russia attended a ceremony conferring an honorary degree on the prince—regent, later King George IV.

NO CANDLE

It probably didn't hold a candle to the goings on Saturday.

Finally the two Russians climbed into their cars and headed out of town. A mob of students sped them on their way:

"Poor . . . old . . . Joe!"

U.S. Aircraft Forced Down

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A U.S. Air Force plane returned to Tehran from Cairo Saturday with reports of being intercepted by both Israeli and Egyptian military aircraft. The Egyptians forced the plane to land.

The incidents occurred when the plane was on its way from here to Cairo this week with government men stationed here and their families.

Maj.-Gen. Robert MacClure, chief of the U.S. military advisory group in Tehran, said he has not yet received official written reports on the incidents.

He said, however, the pilot and co-pilot of the plane reported that Israeli Mystere jets intercepted the U.S. plane over the Mediterranean but that it flew on. As it approached the Egyptian coast, he said, MIG15s ordered it to land. It did so on the military field of Almaza.

In Washington, both the State Department and the Air Force confirmed that the Egyptians had intercepted the plane and signalled it to land.

"The Egyptians apparently thought the plane was off course," a State Department spokesman said. He added that after an explanation of the plane's trip, it was allowed to proceed. He said the plane was detained about 45 minutes.

Dozens Of Boats Missing

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Darkness Saturday night hampered a gigantic search for 29 outboard motorboats missing during a race to Catalina Island 21 miles away.

Coast Guard officials said there may be as many as 70 persons on the tiny craft.

The air and sea search began about dusk when the boats failed to show up at the village of Avalon, the finishing point. More than 200 boats were entered in the race, the Outboard Motorboat Assn. reported.

The Coast Guard said 18 vessels, including the 225-foot cutter Ponchartrain, were called out in the search. The aerial search was called off because of darkness.

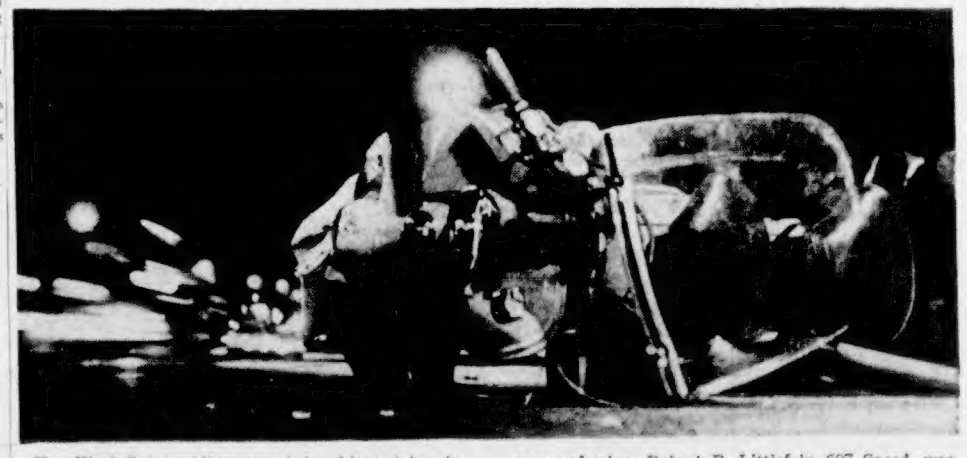
Israel To Get British Arms Embassy Says

LONDON (UP)—Britain is shipping a small consignment of arms to Israel, the Israeli embassy announced yesterday.

It was the second shipment of Western arms to Israel reported this month.

The embassy denied British press reports that the shipment, first from Britain since the Communists began arming Egypt last year, was large and contained heavy equipment.

Soldiers Hurt in Car-Scooter Smash



Two Work Point soldiers were injured last night when they were thrown from this motor scooter in a collision with a car at Douglas and Speed. Leo V. Frank and Jim Reed, both 25, were treated for possible leg fractures, cuts and bruises. Police said the crash occurred when Robert B. Littlefair, 607 Speed, was turning left onto Speed while the motor scooter was heading into town on Douglas.—(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

Critically Hurt

Fiery Snag Pins Woman to Ground

A burning 30-foot snag caused critical head injuries to Mrs. H. G. Taylor, Pat Bay highway, last night, when it crashed to the ground pinning her underneath.

The accident occurred while she and her son were inspecting a rubbish fire on their property.

Central Saanich police said her son, with assistance from friends, pulled her free.

She was then rushed to Royal Jubilee Hospital, where she was in critical condition at midnight.

Penicillin Labelled 'Missile of Death'

COCHRANE, Ont. (CP)—Coroner James D. McClinton said here Saturday that penicillin is a "possible missile of death" and that 600 persons on this continent have probably died as a result of indiscriminate injections of the drug.

Dr. McClinton, coroner for the district of Cochrane, made the statements in a speech prepared for delivery to the Ontario Medical Association.

The wholesale injection of penicillin is often useless and five to 10 per cent of patients given penicillin become sensitive to it, he said.

In Toronto, a leading medical authority, commenting on the statement, said the figure of 600 people who have died in the last 18 months is only a small portion of the very great number of people treated with the drug.

The authority estimated that 58,000,000 persons — about one-third the population of the North American continent—have been treated with penicillin.

'Channel Chuckles' Join Comic Pages

Something brand new in comic pages appears for the first time today in The Daily Colonist's 16-page comic supplement.

It is "Channel Chuckles," a humorous look at television by Bil Keane, the pioneer in this field.

Mr. Keane's daily comic panel has appeared with Roy Parrett's regular "TV Talk" column for months. The new comic page has been started because of the daily panel's popularity.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

A MAN at work can sometimes persuade himself by auto-hypnosis that his children do not exist. The illusion is quickly shattered when his wife brings the small creatures to town and invades the place where the breadwinner is employed.

* * *

One moment he is merrily at work, imagining himself a free citizen. Then he hears a footstep that doesn't belong in the place, and he looks up from his task into three pairs of eyes.

The smallest pair is regarding him solemnly from an elevation of six feet, because the child is being held on its mother's shoulder.

Two more pairs of eyes, belonging to the mother and the walking child, are focused upon the man from the five-foot-six level and the three-foot level respectively.

* * *

"I want some juice and a chocolate bar," says the walking child.

"The grocery money, please," says the child's mother. The visit usually occurs on payday.

The smallest child says nothing, but continues its solemn gaze; then breaks into a foolish grin, stretches out both arms and says "Da-da."

* * *

Such a sudden appearance of his human burdens at a time when he believed himself secure in the workaday world may prove too much for a sensitive man.

In extreme cases, he may run for the exit, board a bus and never return.

Usually, however, he stays and faces facts. But he ages visibly. The young, vigorous man who came bouncing in to work that morning now goes out for a coffee break as a grey-faced, middle-aged father.

No, he tells the boys' mother, the cheque hasn't come through yet for the grocery money, but it should be available very soon.

No, he says to the walking child, he can't come home and play on the lawn, because he has to work now and make some money, so that little boys can have something to eat.

"I'm not hungry," says the little boy. "I don't want anything to eat now," he insists, having finished a chocolate bar and a glass of fruit juice.

"Come home and play, Daddy," he urges. But his bent, glum old father trudges back to work.

Grubstake Becomes Million

A $20,000 gamble by 26 employees of Lundberg Explorations Ltd. of Toronto became a million-dollar payoff when the mining claims in which they invested were bought by Steel Company of Canada. Claims were staked by secretaries, accountants and geologists of the company and they financed exploration and drilling. Walter Hobbs and Ray Hope, left, two of the investors, are examining the motor generator and electro-magnetic equipment used to discover and prove existence of iron ore body near Kapuskasing, Ont.—(CPC)

A PADRE IN PRINT

By REV. WILLIAM HILLS

Tomorrow is St. George's Day, and for all the notice the average citizen will take of this occasion he might as well have been the patron saint of Timbuktu instead of England.

It has always been a puzzle to me why April 23 has taken more than second place to March 17 of February 25, especially in a country which owes its parliamentary practices and its democratic processes to the nation whose patron he is.

Just the other day, I was chatting with the venerable archdeacon of Victoria. He is a genial Irishman and he was gently ribbing me about St. George.

"St. Patrick" he declared, "was a real historic figure but George was only a legend."

Well, I'm not so rash as to dispute with an archdeacon, especially when we were both cosily packed into the back seat of a car—and especially when he has history on his side.

But was his point well taken?

The legend of St. George is real enough even if its subject isn't, but like Santa Claus even a legend can have a practical impact upon the thought and character of the people who believe in it.

St. George did not become the patron saint of England until the reign of Edward III in the 14th century.

His Deeds Forgotten

As a matter of fact even as early as the fifth century, poor old George suffered from an abysmal lack of public relations. His deeds whatever they were had been quite forgotten.

In 494, Pope Gelasius mentioned him in a list of those "whose names are justly reverenced among men, but whose acts are known only to God."

So it would appear that this George, who suffered martyrdom at Lydda in Palestine, was in actual fact an unknown soldier of the Cross.

It seems to me that he could be called "the unknown warrior" who laid down his life for Christ. He is quite appropriately the patron saint of a nation which has honored "the unknown soldier" in the Abbey which is the central shrine of the nation.

Gilbert Chesterton once penned these lines:

"St. George he was for England
And before he killed the dragon,
He drank a pint of English ale
Out of an English flagon."

That, of course, is sheer poetic whimsey but these are days when more of us ought to be for England. Many folk seem disposed to pronounce a funeral oration over the glory of the Mother of Parliaments these days. But, take care, twisting the lion's tail—like Russian roulette—is an exciting but hazardous and finite enterprise!

Automotive Trade Fixes Standards for Workers

By BILL MAVOR

The automotive trade is now "designated" for the issuance of certificates of proficiency.

Labor Minister Lyle Wicks has announced that the trade is now under provisions of the Apprenticeship and Tradesmen's Qualification Act.

Certificates, obtained by tradesmen upon voluntary application for examination, will be issued for mechanics, body finishing and refinishing, automobile trimming, upholstery and general interior finishing, and for radiator work.

All these were components of the trade for apprenticeship purposes and now also have been placed under the provisions of qualifications outlined in the act.

To obtain a certificate any person will have to submit proof of completion of a period of practical training in the trade before an examination is allowed.

Appointment of examiners was not announced. It is learned, however, that the next step will be discussions between labor, management and government, including the education department, to prescribe examinations.

In error was a report in this column some weeks ago that an examining board had been set for the trade.

Automotive Retailers' Association of 1,200 garage and service station operators throughout B.C., including 160 member firms in Greater Victoria, took exception to reports that operators here and in Vancouver were in disagreement about examinations.

The association states there is no difference of opinion. "The association is unanimously of the opinion that the legislation will do much to raise the level of efficiency in the industry, guaranteeing to the motoring public fully qualified and efficient workmanship and service."

The Victoria and Vancouver trade unions involved cannot agree upon the legislation. The union here favors certification on the voluntary basis whether or not by a government board.

Vancouver workers favor examining workers, but strictly by a union board.

A four-hour extension of the 44-hour work week in the logging industry began Thursday, effective until Nov. 30, 1956.

The Board of Industrial Relations granted the extension, sought by companies and opposed by the CCL federation and woodworkers' union, but ruled that work shall not exceed eight hours daily as under the Hours of Work Act.

Chris Pritchard, of the Workmen's Compensation Board, will address a meeting in May of the Victoria District Trades and Labor Council (TLC). A definite date is not known.

* * *

The Board of Industrial Relations is investigating union complaints that a sub-contractor has violated the $1-an-hour minimum wage order for pipeline construction work near Fort St. John. The contract involves clearing right-of-way.

A unionist who was an executive or committee member in his union for 20 years has retired from the Victoria Typographical Union (AFL-TLC).

Vince J. Baines was a past president of the local and of the B.C. Typographical Conference, and was a TLC labor council vice-president for many years.

In Victoria since 1912, he served overseas in the First World War, being injured, and took up his trade with the Victoria Times on his return in 1923.

Assigned to only one convention during his years, he travelled to Vancouver.

Moving up the union ladder is Norman Gillan, recording secretary of the Victoria Milk Drivers' and Dairy Employees' Union (TLC). He becomes business agent of the Vancouver Laundry Workers local 292, on May 2.

His appointment was announced by the teamsters' union of which both locals are affiliates.

A Palm Dairies driver, he has been a union delegate to Victoria District Trades and Labor Council and the Senior Citizens Campaign Council, and has taken a personal interest in James Bay PTA.

Garden Notes

Ring Culture Gets Results

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Ring Culture of Tomatoes — (G. E. G., Victoria). The ring culture you mention is a new method of growing greenhouse tomatoes.

The rings—lengths of drain pipe or pots with an enlarged hole in the bottom—are set on beds of cinders and filled with a normal soil mixture. The tomato plants, growing in these rings, make two sets of roots. The upper set, growing in the soil of the rings, is fed with chemical fertilizers, while the lower set forages for the moisture reserves in the bed of damp cinders below.

Some phenominal crops have been reported from greenhouses using this method, but its chief advantage is in its economy. The cinder beds may be used year after year without replacement or sterilizing.

Polyanthus Primrose—(W. L. L., Duncan). Polyanthus are unlikely to come true from seed, especially when, as in your case, they are growing in beds of mixed colors. Dividing the plants is the only way of perpetuating the especially desirable colors. Providing that good cultivation is maintained, the size of the blooms should not deteriorate.

Lift your selected plants immediately after flowering, divide them, and replant six inches apart each way in a shady bed enriched with leaf mould. Lift again in October and plant back into their sunny flowering position. It is a good idea to mulch the surface of the sunny winter bed with thoroughly decayed manure in February.

Choice of Greenhouse—(T. J. A., Saanich). Whether you select a greenhouse with glass right down to ground level, or one with a wood, brick or concrete base, will depend on what you want to use it for.

If you plan on growing crops such as tomatoes and chrysanthemums planted directly in soil beds, the all-glass type is to be preferred. If you want the house mainly for subjects growing in pots or boxes, you would be better off with a solid base and suitable staging.

Vines for Shade—(C. D., Victoria). A very suitable vine for a high, north-facing wall would be the self-climbing Virginia creeper (Ampelopsis veitchii) which gives an attractive cover of greenery in summer, turning to vivid scarlet in autumn.

There are gold and silver variegated ivies available, too, and these also would cling to your wall without any need of wires or other supports.

Red Hot Pokers—(L. P. R., Wellington). The best time of year to lift and divide your Red Hot Pokers is early April, but it is not too late now. These plants demand a soil which is well drained, where no water stands in winter, and generous manuring. A top dressing of peat or compost after replanting would be appreciated.

Peruvian Lily — (L. F., Oak Bay). You'll never grow good Alstroemerias as long as you keep moving them around, for these Peruvian lilies are extremely resentful of root disturbance. They are best planted while quite young — April is the best month — and left strictly alone thereafter. They like a warm, sunny position in well drained soil with a bit of grit in it.

Incidently, these plants are not lilies, nor do they come from Peru. They are members of the Amaryllis family and are natives of Chile.

Interest Creates Life Zest

VANCOUVER (CP)—More interesting jobs for all instead of shorter hours is the formula British author J. B. Priestley offered for a happy life here Friday.

Mr. Priestley told an audience at the University of British Columbia "we must find that work increases, rather than diminishes, man's self-respect."

Jack Brown, director of industrial relations for the B.C. Electric Co., opposed Mr. Priestley in the panel discussion by saying:

"Big business with its mass distribution methods made possible the high standard of living enjoyed in North America."

Mr. Priestley replied that a "gadget standard of values" prevails on this continent and that the smallest child in the world is more important than the greatest corporation.
